U.S.-Soviet Talks Set Soon

Oran Man Shot in Chest

BENTON -- Jessie McClinton, 42, of Oran is reported in poor condition at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, suffering from a gunshot wound in the chest.

Sheriff John Dennis said his office was called at 3 p.m. Sunday to investigate the shooting.

Witnesses said McClinton and J. T. Woods, a resident of the Sands area south of Benton near Morley, were at Turner's Tavern in Hayward City.

Witnesses said McClinton went over to the Woods car and hit Woods on the head with a beer bottle.

Woods went home, got a pistol and went to the McClinton home to wait for McClinton, Sheriff Dennis said. When McClinton arrived home, he was shot.

Woods put McClinton in his car and drove back to the tavern, where law officers were called, Sheriff Dennis said.

Charges were not immediately filed.

Beer, Cash Taken in Burglary

GRANT CITY --A burglary at the Anchor Inn early Sunday netted thieves about $60 in cash and four cases of beer, Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said.

Frank Null, owner of the 3.2 beer tavern, told Dennis he closed the tavern at 1:15 a.m. Sunday and discovered the breakin at 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

All coin machines had been broken into and four cases of beer were missing.

Entrance was gained by prying the lock on the front door.

De Gaulle Polls Decisive Win

PARIS (AP) — After France's biggest election landslide in 49 years President Charles de Gaulle had a mandate today to repair the economic damage of weeks of labor and social strife and to carry out a sweeping reform of France's industrial and educational systems.

The voters in the final round Sunday of the two-stage National Assembly elections gave the Gaullists and their allies a majority of more than 200 seats in the 487-seat legislature.

Harwell has been in business here 33 years.

He purchased the store, which was then known as S & H Auto Parts, Oct. 1, 1936, after serving as manager for a year.

According to officers, Jenkins, who had been drinking, was asleep, and awoke to find James Trumbull sitting in a chair in another room, talking to his wife.

The charge struck Jenkins' wife in the head. She died instantly.

Court Fee Bills May Be Revived

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Three bills raising court fees in St. Louis got a new chance in the Missouri Legislature today.

The bills were killed last week by the Senate Committee on Municipal Corporations on a 4-5 vote. But at the request of Mayor A. J. Cervantes, Sen. Japser M. Brancato, D-Kansas City, the chairman, agreed to reconvene his committee today to reconsider the measures.

If passed, they would raise court fees by about $300,000 this year and $600,000 in subsequent years.

Opponents charged some of the increases were too great and would have the effect of denying justice to the little man, especially in small civil suits.

Cervantes said unless the bills are passed the city's financial straits will be so desperate some employes will have to be laid off.

Both houses had planned to adjourn the special session late today. But if the bills are revived, Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters, D-Liberty, said he would reconvene the Senate to consider them Tuesday.

The House adopted a "wait and see" attitude until after the Senate acts.

Final adjournment had been scheduled for 5 p.m. until the St. Louis bill got a second chance.

Matthews Outlaws Livestock, Fireworks

MATTHEWS -- Ordinances prohibiting keeping livestock within 400 feet of any residence, outlawing the sale or shooting of fireworks within the city limits and leaving junked motor vehicles on property or streets within the city limits have been passed by the city council.

Conviction on violation of the livestock ordinance carries a maximum penalty of $100 fine, six months in city jail or both.

The board of aldermen reserves the right to license an organization to hold fireworks exhibits within the city limits.

Maximum penalty on conviction of violating the fireworks ordinance is $100, 10 days in jail or both.

The junked motor vehicle ordinance requires the violator to remove the vehicle within seven days of being notified by the city marshal. When the owner's name is unavailable the city marshall is authorized to remove it to city property for storage and eventual disposal if the owner does not claim it within 15 days of removal.

Maximum penalty for violation is $100 fine, 30 days in city jail or both.

U.S. Plane Forced to Land on Soviet Island

WASHINGTON (AP) — An airliner carrying 214 U.S. servicemen to Vietnam is being held today on a Soviet island in the Pacific Ocean after being forced to land by MIG fighters.

The chartered DC-8 was on its way to Vietnam from McChord Air Base in Seattle, Wash., Sunday when, the U.S. government said, it strayed off course and was forced to land on Iturup Island, a part of the Kuril chain in the northern Pacific.

The State Department immediately contacted the Soviet embassy in Washington and urged the quick release of the plane, its passengers and the 17 crewmen.

A Japanese air force radar station said it began tracking the plane at 7:30 p.m. EDT Sunday and warned the pilot he was on a course that would cross the Soviet-held island.

The pilot replied, "We cannot alter our course," Japanese sources said, indicating the plane already was under MIG escort.

The sources said the plane was tracked another five minutes before it disappeared from radar screens at a position about 30 miles south of Iturup Island.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson said in Moscow he was told by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and First Deputy Foreign Minister Vsily V. Kuznetsov the incident is under investigation.

The Pentagon said the pilot of the chartered Seaboard-World Airlines jet, Joseph Tosolini, talked by radio with another American aircraft during the incident.

According to the Pentagon, the pilot of the Seaboard plane reported about 7:20 p.m. that MIG fighters had intercepted him and was forcing him to land at what appeared to be a MIG base on an island.

At 7:39 p.m., the Pentagon said, the Seaboard plane radioed that it had landed without injury to anyone on board and without damage to the plane.

The last transmission was at 7:42 p.m. when the pilot reported he had shut off his engines, the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department, in announcing that the plane had been forced to land, said the aircraft, chartered from Seaboard by the Military Airlift Command, had strayed off its course enroue to Yokota, Japan.

In New York, headquarters for Seaboard-World, a spokesman for the charter line said the crew had flown the route several times and "we don't see how it could have been off course, unless there were some extraordinary factors."

Seaboard identified the rest of the crew as Henry Treger, copilot; Earl Scott, flight engineer and Lawrence Guernon, navigator.

The plane also carried several in-flight checkers and stewardesses.

Plan for Area Okayed

MALDEN -- The executive committee of the Bootheel regional planning commission has approved a comprehensive development plan for the Bootheel area.

Pat Lea of Sikeston, chairman of the planning commission, advised members of the committee that it was necessary for the commission to adopt and approve a plan in order for community projects to be approved by the housing and urban development office in Fort Worth.

Hurshel Crass, Jefferson City, of the community affairs department stated that several projects were being held up in the Forst Worth office pending the approval of the plan by the commission.

He reported that projects from New Madrid, East Prairie, Bloomfield, Steele, Dexter, Morehouse and Marston are in the Fort Worth office.

One Killed in Car-Truck Crash

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo. (AP) - Leon Wilber, 27, of St. Louis was killed early today when his car collided with a tractor trailer on U. S. 61 in Ste. Genevieve County.

Five other persons are injured, two are in critical condition.

Treaty Signed Jointly

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Johnson announced today that the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to start talks "in the nearest future" on limiting offensive and defensive nuclear missiles systems.

Johnson chose the occasion of the signing of the historic nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty at the White House to make his announcement.

White House officials reported 51 nations were joining the pact, to ban the spread of atomic weapons.

Signing ceremonies were conducted also in London and Moscow.

Hours before President Johnson spoke, Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin announced in Moscow that the Soviet Union wants to hold international talks on disarmament, including a halt in the manufacture of nuclear weapons and reduction of nuclear weapon stockpiles.

Kosygin also proposed discussions on limitation and reduction of "means of delivery of strategic weapons."

The premier attacked the United States. He said the need to eliminate foreign military bases, one of the Russian proposals, "is convincingly proved by the continued aggressive war of the U.S.A. in Vietnam."

In London, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, presiding at the signing ceremony there, called the treaty: "The most important measure of arms control and disarmament on which agreement has yet been reached."

Wilson pledged that Britain would continue "with renewed confidence and renewed hope to work for further advances in disarmament." Johnson, in his remarks, referred to the long U.S. effort to start discussions on cutting back the costly nuclear arms race. Moscow had indicated last Thursday that the Soviets were finally ready for such talks.

"At this moment of achievement and hope," the President said, "I am gratified to be able to report and announce to the world a significant agreementan agreement I have actively sought and worked since January 1964.

Kosygin Calls for Talks to Ban Underground Tests

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin told signers today of a treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons that the Soviet Union is ready to hold international talks on banning underground tests, the last remaining area for the trial explosion of atomic arms.

Kosygin said the talks could extend to the ending of nuclear weapons manufacture and the reduction of nuclear stockpiles. He also proposed discussions on the "The limitation and subsequent reduction of means of delivery of strategic weapons."

As Kosygin spoke, the Seismological Institute at Uppsala, Sweden, registered a strong "underground explosion" in the Soviet Union north of the Caspian Sea. It rated it at 6.6 on the Richter scale.

Kosygin's brief speech came at the Nonproliferation Treaty signing ceremony here. Similar ceremonies were conducted in London and Washington.

The Russians also proposed discussions on "The limitation and subsequent reduction of means of delivery of strategic weapons."

The Soviet premier's proposal to talk about reducing the longrange rockets, bombers and submarines which can deliver nuclear bombs was given added urgency by a report from Communist sources in Moscow that Red China has developed its first intercontinental ballistic missile.

Kosygin said the Soviet government sent a memorandum to all other governments with nine proposals for disarmament and peaceful cooperation.

The proposals also included prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, a proposal the Russians have made many times before.

B52s Make Viet North Raids

SAIGON (AP) -- American B52 bombers raided North Vietnam today for the first time in nearly two months and also dropped thousands of tons of explosives on secret Viet Cong bases in the provinces around Saigon.

Twenty-five of the U.S. Air Force's biggest bombers streaked over the northern half of the demilitarized zone and the southernmost part of North Vietnam to bomb coastal artillery sites which have been shelling U.S. destroyers and cruisers operating off the coast.

The key strike inside North Vietnam was around Cape Lay, 11 miles above the allied base at Gio Linh.

The B52s last attacked inside North Vietnam on May 9.

The big bombers also kept on pounding enemy concentrations outside Saigon as part of the campaign against a major new attack expected on the capital. Police sources said they had fresh intelligence reports that the Communist command has ordered Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars to regroup at secret bases in the area, some as far as 75 miles away from the capital, to prepare for a full-scale attack this month.

Ten of the eight-jet bombers attacked some of the enemy's largest base camps in Tay Ninh, a longtime Viet Cong stronghold along the Cambodian border 47 miles northwest of Saigon. Military strategists consider Tay Ninh a potential springboard for the third offensive against Saigon.

Fifteen B52s pounded other camps in Hau Nghia and Binh Duong provinces, which form a border triangle with Tay Ninh northwest of the city.

Another 1_ bombers hammered enemy troop concentrations in Long Khanh Province, reportedly the headquarters of the North Vietnamese 5th Division 57 miles from Saigon

The new intelligence reports said enemy forces attacking Saigon would consist of infantrymen, sappers and an artillery regiment equipped with rockets, recoilless rifles and mortars. These would be ordered to seize sensitive government installations.

Construction Under Way on $4 Million Shopping Center

Officers of the Kingsway Plaza, Inc., a $4 million shopping center under construction on South Kingshighway, south of the intersection of Murray Lane, announced today the schedule of construction and the names of three of five major firms on which leases have been signed.

George Staples Jr., president of Kingsway Plaza, and Don Evans, secretary-treasurer, both of Charleston, made the announcement in a news conference in the community room of the First National Bank of Sikeston.

The center is to be located on a 31.5 acre tract on the southwest corner of South Kingshighway and Murray Lane. It is to be an air conditioned, enclosed mall-type center containing approximately seven acres under roof, with parking space provided for 2,424 automobiles.

Major tenants of the center include: J.C. Penney & Co. with 78,713 square feet; J.J. Newberry with 40,500 square feet; Safeway Supermarket with 17,232 square feet; plus a drive-in facility for the First National Bank of Sikeston.

Dearmont Oliver & Sons of Charleston is the contractor for clearing and grading of the property. The initial clearing began June 24. It is expected to be readied for actual building construction by Aug. 1, Staples said.

Tri State Steel Builders, Inc. of Charleston is the prime building contractor. Leon DuVall, Charleston, executive vice president of Tri State, attended the conference today.

Construction on the Penney building will start first as soon as the ground is readied probably by Aug. 1, Staples said.

Then, construction will start on the Newberry store, then Safeway and then the center complex. The five major stores on which leases have been signed are expected to be ready for occupancy by Oct. 1, 1969, Staples said.

A national chain drug store presently is being negotiated with for the center and it possibly will be ready for occupancy by October, 1969, Staples said.

The outside completion date for entire center complex is slated for Oct. 1, 1970, Staples said.

The center, as planned now, will contain a total of 36 individual stores. Negotiations are proceeding with a theater to be built near the Penney Co. in the complex. If the theater is built, it would eliminate space for six of the smaller store places in the plans now, Staples said.

The other stores include drug stores, shoe stores and speciality shops.

In addition to the five major stores, leases have been signed on two smaller stores, Staples said.

Staples said a news release could be expected within the next 10 days on the two other major stores in the complex. They will be a variety store and a department store, he said.

This center has been two years in the planning and developing and as a result, Sikeston will have the most modern shopping complex available, Evans said.

The most important changes in plans disclosed today and those announced a year ago was the need to modify leases on the major stores in respect to commencement dates and completion dates, Staples said.

For esthetic purposes, the mall is being designed to contain fountains and shrubbery. It will be possible to shop in all 36 stores without leaving the comfort of the air conditioned mall, Evans said.

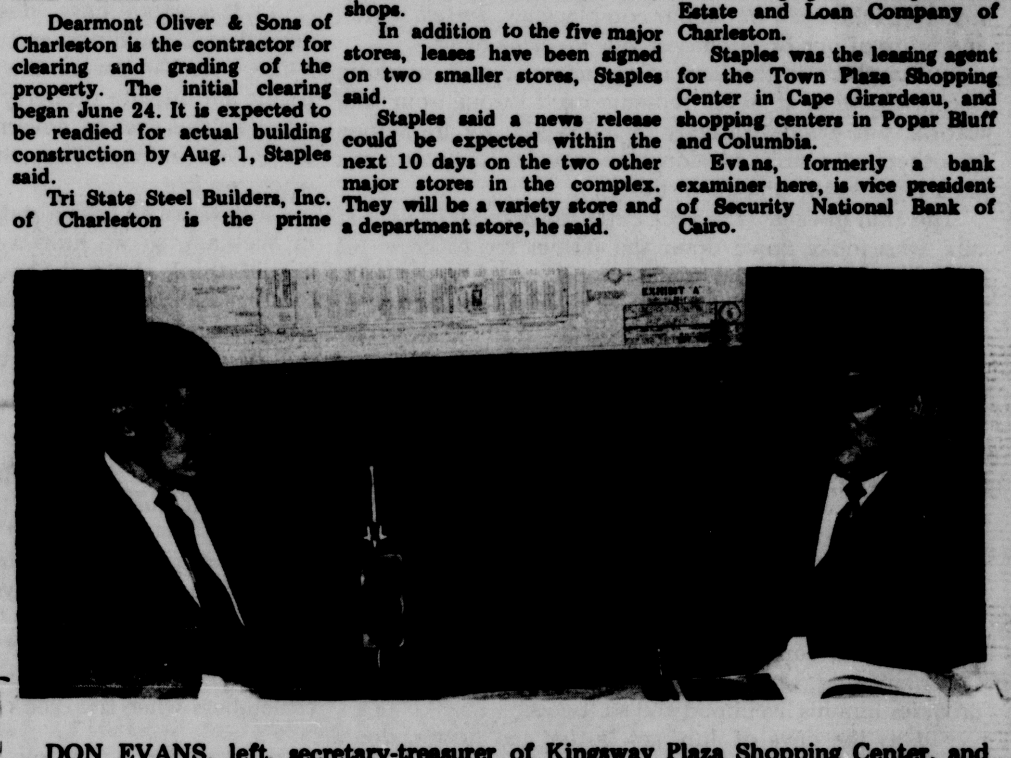
"With major industry moving into the area and hundreds of new jobs being created, a center of this size will establish Sikeston as the retail trading center for all of southeast Missouri," Staples said.

Kingsway Plaza will not only serve as a regional trading center, but will give employment to approximately 350 persons, thus it will be another major industry for Sikeston, Staples noted.

The architects are Gordon and Wilson, A.I.A. of St. Louis. The leasing agent is Staples Real Estate and Loan Company of Charleston.

Staples was the leasing agent for the Town Plaza Shopping Center in Cape Girardeau, and shopping centers in Popar Bluff and Columbia.

Evans, formerly a bank examiner here, is vice president of Security National Bank of Cairo.



DON EVANS, left, secretary-treasurer of Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center, and George Staples Jr., right, president, both of Charleston, announced today the construction schedule of five major stores on which leases have been signed. The five major stores are expected to open in October of 1969.

Penney, Newberry Tell of Plans for New Stores

Company officials for the J.C. Penney Co. and the J.J. Newberry Co. announced today details of plans for the stores to open in the Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center.

Officials of both companies said the openings are based on a confidence in Sikeston's potential as a major shopping area in Southeast Missouri.

Penney has decided to move ahead with a plan to build a 67,140-square-foot department store in the shopping center, according to Stan Bush, store manager.

The store will be a single level structure of 64,080 square feet and have an equipment penthouse of 3,060 square feet. Penney's present store on New Madrid and Front streets will close with the opening of the new shopping center facility.

Penney's Kingsway Plaza store will offer a wide selection of the chain's private-brand hard lines, and a full assortment of fashion apparel. The spaciousness of the new building will make it possible for a wider range and greater selection of merchandise than was previously available in the downtown store.

In keeping with its policy of offering customers one-stop shopping service, the store will have an 8,478 square foot auto center providing full car servicing and complete assortment of the company's new, foremost private-brand tires, batteries and auto accessories. The ten-car bay, free standing facility will offer Sikeston motirists full front-to-rear overhaul and repair work. A main feature of the auto center will be Penney's Foremost brand gasoline.

The building will measure 180 by 356 feet and will be air-conditioned throughout.

Announcing plans for construction of the new Penney store, V.O. Lindstrom, regional Penney manager from St. Louis, said:

"We are pleased about this new store because it will enable Penney's to do a better job of bringing quality merchandise, low prices and friendly service to Sikeston and surrounding communities. This new store is evidence of our faith in the future of Sikeston and of Missouri generally.

"The new Penney store will offer a full assortment of soft lines and ready-to-wear for which the Penney Company has long been famous."

In addition, Penney's Kingsway Plaza store will carry a large selection of Penncrest appliances, decorative home furnishings, housewares, sporting goods, toys and outdoor equipment.

"Layout of merchandise in the new store will be arranged to present complete lines by style, size, price and color for easy shopping," Lindstrom added.

The store will have flourescent lighting with items of special interest spotlighted to emphasize color and details. Warm pinks and beiges will decorate women's fashion departments, lively colors will please the younger set. Men's and boys' departments will be set off by stronger colors associated with active living.

Directional signs and department markers will be used to pinpoint the location of merchandise. Straight, wide aisles will permit customers to shop the entire store in a single visit. High ceilings will add to the effect of spaciousness.

The Newberry department store will offer more than 50 merchandise catagories. They include family wearing apparel, fashion accessories, shoes, infant's wear, domestics, housewares, fabrics, hardware, paints, toys, toiletries, sporting goods, luggage and appliances grouped and displayed as complete shops within the larger framework of the store.

The concept of shops within a shop makes selection easier and saves customers' shopping time, John J. Newberry Jr., vice president, said.

Cashier stations and store layout will be engineered to give the greatest possible customer convenience.

In addition, a modern and efficiently equipped coffee shop will serve moderately priced meals and snacks.

Because constant high quality of all merchandise is of primary importance, a quality control department and testing laboratory is maintained in the company's New York City distribution center.

"In our efforts to insure merchandise performance, our laboratory testing methods are designed to simulate consumer use as nearly as is possible," said D. D. Milius, New York, senior vice president in charge of all merchandise in the chain.

THE COYOTES' NIGHT TO HOWL

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Count one for the coyotes in the hills near here. The Pasadena board of directors has turned down a proposed ordinance that would have permitted the trapping of coyotes in the Anandale-Linda Vista-San Rafael hills.

Some residents had complained that coyotes were killing dogs and cats. But friends of the coyotes wrote 100 letters, saying that the beasts help keep down rodents, that steel traps are cruel and dangerous and that the coyote population is a colorful heritage of the west.

WE TRULY BELIEVE

The Fourth of July isn't what it used to be and that's one happy change we'll go along with. We're referring to the fireworks that used to fill the air and deafen the ears - to say nothing of endangering life and limb. In days gone past, powerful fireworks were placed in the hands of precocious little imps, sometimes referred toto as little boys, of which we used to be one. Looking back to those times, we're amazed that we lived to grow up.

And now that we're rid of fireworks to a large extent, we have Holiday traffic on the highways, and there are always those who just must pass everybody else, so the best way to spend a safe and sane Fourth is to stay home. You'll have just as much fun and you'll be all in one piece the next day.

Our country has grown and changed since July 4, 1776 when the American patriots adopted and signed the Declaration of Independence in Independence Hall in Philadelphia. We wonder what they would think of our country could they be here today. Would they approve of the course into which we, as stewards, have allowed our country to drift? Those men were willing if necessary to give their lives for Freedom, but over the years since that eventful day on July 4, 1776, patriotism, as those men knew it, has gradually waned and down through the years, slowly but surely, we have and are today allowing those precious Freedoms to be taken from us, one by one, in return for doles from an ever increasing paternalistic government.

How much farther down that road are we going to travel? Have we all ready gone so far that there is no turning back? Shall we, in our complacency, forfeit more and more of our Freedoms, or will we call a halt?

America is still the land of opportunity and, speaking of opportunity, it never presents itself through our sole efforts, but always, directly or indirectly, we are helped by others who assist us along the way and they, too, fill their place in the scheme of things.

The skill of each of us is of importance to all of us. Let him who looks down upon the farmer try to grow his own food - or him who snubs the carpenter try to build his own shelter. Let him who derides the tailor try to make his own clothes - or him who belittles the laundress try to iron his own shirts. The proud and pompous need but to remind themselves that Jesus was a carpenter, Mohammed was a shepherd and Moses was a keeper of flocks. Then he would require respect of all God's children and admiration and appreciation for the special contribution each makes to our way of life.

And so life is an endless cycle that goes on and on and everything we do affects others and contributes to or lessens their welfare. And as the days get warmer and some of us sit in comfort with our air conditioners or electric fans, some one else is working to supply the electricity and, likewise, our purchasing these appliances provides him his livelihood and so it goes.

But as the days of July get hotter and hotter, don't spend all your time trying to keep cool. If you do, you'll get behind with the rent and you'll otherwise be unhappy. The easiest way to keep cool is to keep busy. A breeze created through one's own efforts is the most satisfying breeze of all and it brings in the money along with it.

DON'T FORGET SPENDING CUTS!

What voters will watch for now is that the Administration-promised $6 billion cut in federal spending is really made.

Months ago the 10 per cent income tax surcharge was considered as unlikely as a July blizzard. A tax increase in an election year is generally unthinkable.

But Congress sensed the prevailing mood that inflation, interest hikes, the gold crisis and increasing costs of the Vietnam war are a real threat to the nation's continued prosperity.

Even election year campaign oratory could not disguise the threat of a looming budget deficit of $24 billion.

Mr. Johnson says he will sign the bill even though he strongly opposed the $6 billion spending cut in what he told Congress were essential programs already reduced to rock-bottom levels.

Tax increases have a habit of sticking like leeches. No one expects this new surcharge to be dropped with next year's June 30 deadline. But taxpayers forced with cutting their own personal spending will keep a watchful eye to see the succeeding Administration does the same.

STAR—SPANGLED PERENNIALS

Just as sure as most American firecrackers are made in Japan, the following will take place on or about July Fourth:

One elder statesman (meaning a politician who never got caught) in every city, town and hamlet in an interview that no one is interested in listening to patriotic speeches by elder statesmen on Independence Day anymore.

Four hundred and seventy-two editorials will warn against the dangers of fireworks. Sixteen thousand merrymakers will nevertheless be injured by fireworks 19 more than last year, when the same warnings were issued.

Twelve hundred and four newspapers will run picture of crowded beaches.

Seven aged sportswriters will recall for the 51st consecutive year that the Boston Braves won the 1914 National League pennant and World Series even though they were in last place on July 4th.

One hundred and four headlines will say, "Clear Skies For Holiday."

Thirty-six comic strips will be based on the irony of sedentary characters knocking themselves out during the long weekend by swilling endless quarts of beer mowing the lawn, playing golf, swimming, surfing, rowing, traveling on crowded highways, holding cookouts and climbing the Himalayas.

Every newspaper in every community will print a schedule of holiday events. Nevertheless, the city room phone will ring endlessly, with constant readers asking, "When's the band concert?" 'Where's the fireworks?" "What time's the bonfire?" 'Where's the beauty pageant?.. What time does the ball game start?" "Where's the races?" 'Who's on first?"

Eighty-two editorial page cartoons will show a kindly Uncle Sam lighting a giant firecracker under three oddballs named Chou, Mao and Ho.

No parade crowd will be estimated at less than 100,000.

Twenty-two thousand newspapermen who have to work on the holiday weekend will quietly count their blessings.

NO ONE ESCAPES

While most of us have been simple bystanders as we read and saw civil disorders in our nation that have virtually wrecked large areas of many American cities we tended to thank providence that we had escaped the unpleasantness.

But have we escaped? We most decidedly have not.

Reporters have described the riot-torn streets demolished buildings and hoodlums making off with stolen merchandise as the "other war." Destruction of public and private property will be reflected in insurance rates, in the cost of government and hundreds of other direct and indirect ways that are inescapable no matter where we live.

Just as we all have a stake in the tragic cost of the war in Vietnam, so we have a stake inthe "other war." We should think about it the next time we see or read of looting and burning. It may not be our own property going up in smoke or being carried off by vandals but we will be paying part of the cost of both the lost property and the forces of law and order that must be called upon to bring the destruction to an end.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

The same streak in her nature that impels a girl to become an old maid also often leads her to prefer a pet cat for company rather than a dog. Cats keep their place; dogs, like men, are more troublesome around the house, boisterous, and clamorous of affection.

In a zoo the tiger is the animal most contemptuous of peering humanity. But the gorilla has the saddest look of any captive creature. Something in his hurt eyes says, "You and I both know that I shouldn't be here."

Remember when national political campaigns used to win the kind of attention that only pro football now gets? The game may soon become a springboard to elective public office. Anyone looking around for good future presidential possibilities might do well to keep in mind some of the bright young quarterbacks throwing footballs in the professional leagues. After all, they've got at least three big qualifications— talent, leadership, brains—an.

We rarely take the trouble to know thoroughly the things we love or admire. For example, everybody likes to see butterflies, but of the hundreds of varieties around most of us can name only two—cabbage and Monarch.

The guys we find easiest to forget are those who hand us their business cards so we'll be sure to remember who they are.

The reason teen-agers can talk so endlessly on the telephone is that they are telling each other the truth—they haven't found out yet how disastrous the truth can be. The reason grownups get tired of a telephone conversation so quickly is that they are usually telling each other lies, and after 40 it takes too much energy to lie more than a few minutes at a time.

It is no longer necessary to build a better mousetrap to get the world to beat a path to your door. As many a suburbanite has found out, all that is necessary is to build a swimming pool in your backyard. The world will then show up at the front door in a swimsuit—and expect you to furnish the towels.

How do you explain the financial success of some butchers? By a simple rule of thumb.

One of the troubles with marriage today is that too many women get their money from their husband—and their opinions from a male hairdresser.

Poelker, himself, is a political figure who is unwilling to suggest and then support legislative measures, save for some of the more obvious ones that never get to the root of the problem.

Missouri Governors aren't to blame for the crisis of urban sprawl centers in the state. They really have no special obligation to the cities, particularly when aid to the cities would jeopardize existent state programs that are of concern to all of Missouri.

If Governor Hearnes thinks he's under political pressure to help the cities, just let him-and we don't expect him to-start neglecting his resonsibilities for state programs.

H.L. Hunt Says

U THANT ATTACKS THE UNITED STATES

The United Nations Secretary-General, supposedly non-partisan and objective, has joined the communists in using the U.N. as a forum for anti-U.S. attacks.

The U.N. charter reads that the secretary-general and his staff "must. . .refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsive only to the United Nations." Yet U Thant has used his office to deliver speeches strongly attacking the U.S. and supporting the official communist line.

Several times U Thant has condemned our government for refusing to recognize Red China, but has never condemned the aggressive policies of Peking nor pointed out that the Chinese communists have no legal right to hold power.

He also condemned our efforts to defend South Vietnam, on one occasion describing our bombing of North Vietnam as "of questionable morality and doubtful legality." There was no mention of the obviously illegal and immoral attempts of the Viet Cong to enslave South Vietnam and of the terrorism and atrocities of which they are guilty.

The Secretary-General called upon the U.S. to halt all bombing, but suggested no concessions by the North Vietnamese. This plays directly into the hands of the aggressors.

He extended his attacks to U.S. internal affairs by stating that "the prevailing mood of violence in the United States" is "a consequence of the psychological climate created by the Vietnamese war." Again, this is the communist line. U Thant is using his office for obvious partisan purposes and is seriously injuring the cause of genuine peace by his biased and intemperate remarks. HLH

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Anti-violence campaign finds favor with TV audience and industry; Networks reappraise and revise programs; Parents should boycott sponsors of children's horror shows

WASHINGTON—In response to our columns on TV violence, thousands of advertisers, broadcasters and viewers have written or phoned us that they wish to join in the campaign to eliminate bloodshed from the home screen. Here are the heartening developments:

1. An outpouring of mail has come from aroused parents who have resolved to turn off TV programs that feature violence, and to boycott the products of companies that sponsor TV violence. Some parents have told us that they also intend to stop buying toy guns and other weapons for their children.

2. A group of advertising men, calling themselves Advertising Men for the De-escalation of Violence on TV, has formed on Madison Avenue. Its members agree to urge to stop sponsoring violence on TV.

3. Levi Strauss and Co., makers of slacks, shirts and jackets, has dropped its sponsorship of violent programs. After we identified the company as sponsor of one of the worst shows on television, C. M. Robinson, Jr., the advertising manager, wrote us: "We were tempted to strongly disavow any responsibility for programming which is really controlled by the networks ... as I said, this was our first reaction. We are now convinced that you are right and that it is OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO CONSIDER PROGRAM CONTENT."

4. Network officials, producers and writers have been reappraising their programs. CBS has taken the lead in editing excessive violence out of future scripts. The other two networks also have rewritten and refilmed some violent episodes.

5. Sen. Tom Dodd, D—Conn., has revived his investigation into TV violence. Six years ago, he suppressed evidence that would have embarrassed his friends on the TV networks, particularly NBC. We happen to have copies of the documents he suppressed, which we promise to publish if he tries again to throttle the investigation.

6. Several newspapers have joined in the outcry against TV brutality and bloodshed. Editorials from coast to coast have called for a cleanup of the TV screen.

—POWER OF THE PUBLIC—

The most effective way for the public to get better television, however, is to stop patronizing the sponsors of TV violence. At our request, the National Association for Better Broadcasting has listed the 10 TV shows their experts consider "most detrimental" for children. Their judgment is based upon 17 years of responsible TV monitoring.

Their list of the 10 worst shows on TV includes (1) The Avengers, ABC; (2) Felony Squad, ABC. (3) Guns of Will Sonnett, ABC; (4) Cimarron Strip, CBS; (5) Man from U.N.C.L.E., Syndicated; (6) Batman, ABC; (7) Wild, Wild West, CBS; (8) The Saint, NBC; (9) Rat Patrol, ABC; and (10) Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, ABC.

"All 10 of the programs are excessively violent and graphically illustrate terror, horror, brutality and sadism," Frank Orme, the NABB's executive vice president, reported to us. "All 10 are televised during time periods when the sets are readily accessible to almost all children."

Orme also condemned what he called "The Saturday Morning Ghetto of Animated Horror." The worst of these cartoon shows, he said, are Super President, Superman, Birdman, Herculoid, Super Six, Might Mightor, Space Ghost and Samson and Goliath.

Parents can check for themselves which companies sponsor these kill-for-thrill programs. However, we have gone through the sponsor lists and picked out the companies which have spent the most money on TV violence.

We found more Polaroid camera commercials than any others on the programs condemned by the Better Broadcasting group. Polaroid spent $9,377,000 for TV advertising last year, but it was impossible to break down exactly how much went to pay for TV violence.

Next on the list was Beecham products, manufacturers of MacCleans toothpaste, Brylcream and Kellog's tasteless castor oil. Beecham spent $8,669,700 on TV commercials last year. Our survey showed that the American Tobacco Company, which lavished $45,869,700 on TV advertising in 1967, also spent a large portion on violence shows. American Tobacco produces Lucky Strike, Pall Mall, Tareyton, Carlton and Montclair cigarets.

Other companies which seemed to favor violent programs were Warner-Lambert, producer of DuBarry cosmetics and Listerine, which shelled out $42,515,900 for TV commercials last year; Mars, Inc., makers of Three Musketeers, Mars Bars, Milky Way, Snickers, M and M, Forever Yours and Starbust candies, which spent $11,658,500; and Shell Oil, which had a $19,439,500 TV budget.

Even the Bell Telephone Company, which has won acclaim for its high-quality Bell Telephone Hour, has also sponsored more than its share of TV violence.

It is up to the public now to demonstrate that TV violence doesn't pay.

—POETIC BRITON—

There was so much rejoicing at the United Nations over the success of the joint Soviet-American effort to push through a nuclear non-proliferation pact that the British delegate, Lord Caradon, sat down and wrote a poem.

He was most lavish in praising V. V. Kuznetsov, the Soviet deputy foreign minister, who flew to the UN from Moscow to help rescue the treaty. Wrote Lord Caradon:

"He comes like a dove from the Communist ark,
And light appears where all was dark.
His coming quickly turns the tide;
The propaganda flood subside.
And now that he has changed the weather,
Lion and lam can vote together.
God bless the Russian delegation—
I waive consecutive translation."

Inside Labor

Charges 'White Only' Signs Are Still Up, Harassing Negroes in Labor and Industry

There are scores in all fields who cuss out Clifford L. Alexander Jr. regularly. They say he just doesn't understand, and that solving the "Negro problem" simply by saying go out and hire more black workers is far too simplified a solution.

Mr. Alexander, a former White House aide, is chairman of the commission empowered to provide equal employment opportunities across the land. His critics say that workers of any race, color or creed must at least be qualified, must make themselves available and must be willing to work in the available jobs.

Mr. Alexander says it's industry's problem and labor's too. I asked him to "lay it on the line." Why does he believe as he does? Here is his reply:

By Clifford L.
Alexander Jr.
Chairman of the Equal
Employment Opportunity
Commission

Washington: There has been much talk recently and some action on the continuing employment crisis facing America's minority work force.

A few major corporations have launched experimental training programs for the "hardcore unemployed"; the number of companies actively recruiting top Negro graudates has multiplied several fold; community opinion against the blatant discriminator has hardened.

These are encouraging symbols of progress -- but they are no more than symbols. The average Negro job seeker still faces entry barriers and promotional problems unknown to the white applicant; employment opportunities for the Puerto Rican or Mexican-American are tightly circumscribed simply by virtue of his accent or family origin.

And American industry squanders over $30 billion annually in unrealized Gross National Product through the systematic rejection of minority potential.

Four years ago, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act banned job discrimination; since then, a growing body of executive orders and judicial rulings have reinforced this legislation.

To a significant number of American businessmen, however, discriminatory employment practices remain standard operating procedure, rationalized by the claim of social necessity or company tradition.

The "White Only" sign has been removed from the window, but it has been replaced by other forms of exclusion. The minority applicant is free to apply -- but may have to secure a recommendation from a member of the currently all-white work force unknown to him.

He may be subjected to qualifying exams heavily weighted toward white, middle-class experience; his hiring may be contingent on membership in a union that has steadily resisted integration.

Whether his application is discreetly filed away or rejected outright, the effect on the minority applicant is identical -- and conclusive.

Racism has been packaged and presented in a slogans worthy of industry's best marketing efforts -- but the products remain unchanged. The bigot in grey flannel is as wrongheaded, and as destructive, as his redneck precursor. And the effect is the same -- exclusion or failure to promote the minority worker.

Discriminatory action is frequently wrapped in the cloak of social necessity. We've all heard the excuse, "I'd love to hire a Negro -- or a Puerto Rican -- but the rest of the workers might object."

No businessman would let company consensus stand as his excuse for income tax evasion; no drug manufacturer would argue to the FDA, "My workers aren't used to running the new safety checks, so I didn't want to push them on it."

Employer obligations under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act are just as stringent and just as clear-cut. If a man applies for a job, is qualified for that job, and is rejected because of his skin tone, or accent, or background, the law has been broken and the employer is culpable.

There is an undeniable possibility that minority employes may not be warmly welcomed into the company bowling league or be the hit of the office Christmas party.

But unless a man was hired as social director, his business ability should stand independent of his supposed social acceptability. Neither skin color nor place or origin determine a worker's productivity -- and neither should be factors in the employment decision.

The EEOC, and the federal law, do not seek extraordinary consideration for the minority candidate, but they do demand the elimination of extraordinary barriers.

The average white applicant is not required to guarantee his social prowess; he is simply expected to demonstrate his capability and effectiveness on the job. Companies should demand no less from their minority applicants; they should be restrained by conscience, as they are by law, from demanding more.

The visibly heightened interest industry now shows in the bright young Negro college graduate has created the illusion that minority job opportunity is wide open. Regardless of overall personnel policies, employers are seeking out the exceptionally qualified minority candidate -- the one with the Harvard B.A. or the man who is first in his class at Howard.

We must keep in mind, however, that the white Phi Beta Kappa is also being hotly pursued. In fact, all that has expanded is industry's awareness that the black superman is as much as asset to a firm as the white superman and that both are scarce commodities. But for every superman a firm hires, it also takes on hundreds of average people to fill average jobs.

Until every employer recognizes that the mediocre black man can perform routine tasks as well as the mediocre white man, until he acknowledges that fact by recruiting, hiring, and promoting minority workers of average skill to meet his average needs, millions of minority candidates will remain excluded from industry or trapped in dead-end jobs.

An employer's willingness to "make an exception" for the exceptional minority candidate, his recruiting bulletins proclaiming equal job opportunity on every level, cannot change the distorted pattern of minority employment which characterizes so much of American industry.

For by now the minority candidate, steadily confronted with industry's slogans of exclusion, has finally gotten the message.

He will only apply to those few companies and for those few positions where his acceptance seems a feasible possibility. To counteract potential racist rejections, he "rejects" industry to go into teaching, government, medicine or other professional occupations.

The EEOC hearings in New York City earlier this year produced testimony from major white collar employers that they were willing and eager to hire minority candidates but never seem to see any. We suggested to them that they better go out looking, just as they do for majority candidates.

The company truly committed to equal employment opportunity must realize by now that a positive effort is needed. Only active recruitment will stimulate the minority application; only visible proof that minority opportunity exists will shake his well-founded belief to the contrary.

No Negro professional is likely to apply to a firm which is unable to produce a Negro secretary. Few Spanish-surnamed Americans will be encouraged to pursue careers in a firm where they meet only "Anglo" faces -- from the personnel office to the newspaper advertisement.

Industry's passive insistence that opportunity is there for the taking is a simple evasion -- or deliberate misrepresentation. At this point of crisis in the minority community and in our entire society, we can afford neither.

Business self-righteousness must be translated into honest and active concern. American industry, famous for its energy and creativity, surely has the competence to tackle this pressing problem. It needs the will!

Miss Alice Rainey Bride Of Dewayne Zimmerman

DEXTER -- Lighted tapers in a spiral candelabra and baskets of blue daisies formed the setting in the Missionary Baptist Church of Dexter Saturday night, June 8 for the wedding of Miss Alice Rainey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd G. Rainey of Dexter and Mr. Dewayne Zimmerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Zimmerman of Bernie. The Rev. Marshall Dark officiated at the impressive double ring ceremony at 7:30 in the evening.

A medley of traditional wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. Bob Coffey who also accompanied Joe Mayo of Bloomfield as he sang "Because."

Saturday's bride was given in marriage by her father and was attired in a white crepe A-line dress with empire waistline and train. The skirt, empire waistline and train were accented with bands of white Belgium lace embroidered with pearls. Her shoulder length veil was caught to a pearl encrusted princess crown and she carried a cascade arrangement of stephanotis centered with a white orchid.

Miss Kathy Webber of Dexter, maid of honor, was attired in a blue A-line floor length gown accented with white lace. A matching blue bow was her headdress. She carried blue daisies with white lace trim and ribbons with small blue love knots.

Mrs. Loyd Rainey, mother of the bride, chose for the wedding a mauve bonded lace dress with wood violet accessories. Mrs. Zimmerman chose for her son's wedding a pink knit two piece dress with white accessories. Their corsages were white carnations.

Wedding guests attended the reception immediately after the ceremony. The tables were covered with white lace cloth over blue. The three tiered cake centered the table and was garlanded with blue daisies and green leather leaf.

Miss Colleen Alleman of Dexter was at the guest book. Serving the guests were members of the "Silvertones," a dance group instructed by the bride. Members of the Silvertones are Debra Brown, Karen Fleeman, Rhonda Sifford, Tammy Lashley and Becky Temples.

Mr. Zimmerman and his bride will make their home on East St. Francis Street in Dexter after a short wedding trip to an undisclosed destination.

The former Miss Rainey will continue teaching dancing. She was graduated with the Dexter High School 1968 class.

Park Enlists Aid of Ladybugs

NEW YORK (AP) — In Riverside Park today one million ladybugs are on the prowl for plant pests that destroy foliage —the parks department horticulturist hopes.

The ladybugs were turned loose Thursday, said horticulturist Cornelius O'Shea, to see if they might replace insecticides and other chemicals in ridding the park of the pests.

The ladybugs were purchased from a California hatchery by a private group, the Citizens for Clean Air Inc., which opposes the use of chemical sprays in city parks. The bugs sell for $7.50 a gallon, which contains about 150,000 ladybugs.

MYSTERIES OF URANIS, VENUS

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomers don't understand all about the solar system yet, says Pace College professor of astronomy, Dr. Sune Engelbrektsen. Why the planet Uranis is tilted 97 degrees on its axis and why Venus rotates and revolves clockwise when most planets and satellites spin counterclockwise is not known.

Appreciable progress in solving the problems of realigning and expanding minor league baseball was reported following a six-hour meeting of an expansion committee Monday.

But the committee chairman, Bob Howsam, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, declined to discuss details of the project "mainly because we still are in the exploratory phases."

"We discussed the problems of realignment in accordance with major league expansion and are forwarding our findings to a special planning committee," Howsam added.

New farm outlets must be established at each level of the minors because of the additions of San Diego, Seattle, Kansas City and Montreal to the majors.

Howsam's committee right now is primarily concerned with the stockpiling of 24 Class AAA clubs. "After those are ascertained and established we'll concentrate on double-A working agreements, then the Class A levels," he said.

Since two Pacific Coast League cities, Seattle and San Diego, are committed to the majors in 1969 and a third city, Tacoma, is apt to lose its franchise because of the proximity of Seattle, realignment of the PCL is inevitable.

There is speculation that the PCL and the Class AAA International League may merge to form three eight-team divisions.

Jim Northrup seemed as pleased about breaking out of his hitting slump as he was with the two grand slam home runs he hit to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 14—3 rout of the Cleveland Indians Monday night.

"That's a heckuva way to come out of a slump isn't it?" inquired the tall, slim outfielder who had just tied a major league record. "I haven't been hitting for two weeks."

Northrup said he was just trying to get a fly ball when he hit his first grand slam in six-run fifth inning off one of Eddie Fisher's knuckleballs.

"The second time, I was thinking more of myself," he continued. "I said to myself, 'Here's your chance to tie the record.'"

His second grand slam came off a fastball by Billy Rohr in the sixth inning, when the Tigers scored five runs.

Northrup, a left-handed battered, said his homer off Rohr, a southpaw, came as no surprise because he hits left-handers pretty well, "but I haven't been hitting anybody good this year."

Northrup, who has six career grand slams, is the seventh player to hit two in one game. However, Baltimore's Jim Gentile was the only one of the previous six to do it in successive innings. He hit grnd slams in the first and second innings of a 1961 game.

"The week for week end skippers has arrived," says John Fleming, Director of the National Safety Council's Public Department." By Presidential proclamation, June 30 thru July 6th has been declared National Safe Boating Week."

From coast to coast, local chapters of the 19 groups forming the National Safe Boating Committee will present demonstrations and activities emphasizing boating safety. These groups include the U. S. Coast Guard and the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the U. S. Power Squadrons, local boating clubs, and the National Safety Council. About 7,500 volunteers will spark-plug the week's activities in 1,000 waterfront communities, Fleming announced.

The activities scheduled for the week include safety demonstrations, boat safety clinics, parades, contests, water shows, and free boat safety examinations.

Over 1,100 people lost their lives in boating accidents last year. "An unfortunate fact, says Fleming, is that the majority of these fatalities were drownings and three out of four of these fatalities involved boats with a capacity of less than ten persons."

"The major contributing gactor in small boat drownings," Fleming continued, "is loading the boat beyond it's capacity."

The National Safety Council suggests that all boaters observe the "Ten Commandments of Safe Boating."

. Know your boat
. Don't overload
. Keep a good lookout
. Operate at safe speeds
. Respect the weather
. Take sufficient fuel
. Keep your boat in shape
. Carry necessary equipment
. Secure your boat properly
. Obey the law.

Fleming added that National Safe Boating Week will emphasize the need for safe boating practices throughout the entire boating year.

Since the tragic assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, the general public and our lawmakers in Washington have been stampeded into a mass movement for tougher gun control laws. Most individuals as well as the working press are no more specific than "tougher" and nothing proposed thus far by Congress would have prevented any of the recent assassinations which have started this mass hysteria in the first place.

A large majority of the nation's sportsmen which number in the millions have been willing for many years to accept reasonable controls to keep guns out of the hands of criminals and others who should not have them. They are not willing, however, to accept unreasonable restrictions on honest law-abiding citizens, particularly when they will have little or no effect on crime.

A ban on mail order sale of guns would not have prevented the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and the strict registration of firearms in California did not prevent the death of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

The status of gun control bills is changing so rapidly in Congress that it is impossible to report in Federation members and be up to date.

At this writing, the situation is this: The amendment to the safe streets and crime control bill banning the sale of handguns through the mails has become law.

A similar ban on rifles and shotguns is pending in both houses and has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Action is expected in the Senate Judiciary Committee on June 27. This ban, if passed, would also prevent the exchange of firearms between individuals from different states, including rare sporting arms which no longer are available over the counter.

Another bill to provide for the registration of all firearms is also pending.

The Federation has written the Missouri delegation in Congress urging them to exercise a great deal of care in considering gun control legislation and to base their decisions on sound judgment rather than emotion or mass pressure which is based on emotion.

Lawmakers should consider what effect pending legislation will have on crime and what effect it will have on their law-abiding constituents.

We urge all Federation members to let their Congressmen and Senators know their feelings on this important issue. ACT NOW! Time is of the eseence and your constitutional rights may be in jeopardy.

Leo's Lesson Learned As Cardinals Lose 6-2

A lot of things irk Leo Durocher. One of them is a lack of hustle from his Chicago Cubs.

The Lip decided to do something about it Saturday—he slapped a $200 fine on one of his players for loafing on the basepaths.

Every single Cub hustled Sunday...all the way to a 8-2 conquest of St. Louis' National League leaders. It was the second victory in the three-game series for Chicago, loser of 11 of 12 games before the Cardinals came to town.

But St. Louis held on to its 6 1/2 game lead as Cincinnati whipped San Francisco 5-3 and Los Angeles edged Atlanta 3-2. In other games, New York nipped Houston 1-0 and Pittsburgh stopped Philadelphia 5-2.

Chicago trounced first-place Detroit 12-0, California sailed past Washington 8-4, Baltimore beat Minnesota 6-4, New York checked Oakland 4-2 and Cleveland stopped Boston 7-5 in 10 innings in the American League.

What made the Cubs' victory especially sweet was that it came against old nemesis Steve Carlton.

The left-hander, who had banished the Cubs twice earlier this season including once on a onehitter, was the victim of a three-run uprising in the first inning, then was chased with two more in the fifth.

Singles by Glenn Beckert, Billy Williams and Randy Hundley staked starter Bill Hands, 7-5, to the early lead. The Cubs mixed another single by Williams, Ernie Banks' double and an infield out for the two in the fifth and Jim Hickman lashed a solo homer in the eighth.

Bob Tolan had an eighth-inning homer for the Cards.

Pete Rose's two-run homer and four singles by Lee May powered Cincinnati to a 5-0 lead before San Francisco staged a late eruption.

The Giants combined singles by Jim Hart, Bobby Bonds, pinchhitter Dave Marshall and Dick Dietz for two runs in the eighth, and Hart singled in another in the ninth before Gerry Arrigo and Clay Carroll quieted things down.

Los Angeles made Ken Boyer's second RBI of the day in the third inning stand up to turn back Atlanta. The Braves had tied it 2-2 in the third on Felipe Alou's two-run double.

But the Dodgers came right back on Len Gabrielson's double, Tom Haller's single and Boyer's ground out. Jim "Mudcat" Grant, 3-3, won on a fivehitter.

Pittsburgh rode Willie Stargell's two-run homer in the eighth to its fourth straight victory—handing the Phils their fourth straight defeat.

Astro Denis Menke's confusion over a routine forceout led to New York's only run in the fifth.

Ron Swoboda walked and took third on Jerry Grote's single. Greg Goossen then bounced to second and when Grote stopped in the baseline, Menke tried to tag him out, but lost the ball, permitting Swoboda to score.

Tom Seaver, who struck out eight including five in the first two innings, won his seventh game and fifth straight on a five-hitter.

37,000 Expected At Goose Egg Game

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There has been much debate about the drabness of runless innings and low-score baseball games. Yet more than 37,000 are expected at Dodger Stadium tonight, paying to see two pitchers try to blank each other.

For Los Angeles it will be Don Drysdale, who on June 5 set a major league record by pitching his sixth straight shutout.

Last Wednesday in St. Louis the Cardinals' Bob Gibson hurled his fifth consecutive blank job and shoots tonight for No. 6.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who may not fancy the honor, bowed to Big D 5-0 and to Gibson 3-0. Both the 32-year-old Gibson and Drysdale, 31, are righthanders. Drysdale goes against the National League leaders with a 10-4 season record. Gibson is 9-5 but has won six straight games.

Gibson, who insists he is interested not in records but in winning, is challenging another all-time record that Drysdale set in his brilliant string.

After shutting out the Pirates, Drysdale pitched 4 2-3 scoreless innings against Philadelphia and his record stands at 58 2-3 innings.

Gibson's row of goose eggs stands at 48. It would take extra innings of scoreless ball to eclipse the Drysdale mark, of course.

Last week in St. Louis Gibson declared, "I'm not looking forward to a shutout. I'm looking forward to a win. I only pitched once against Drysdale this year and he beat me, 1-0."

Stock Fees Probed in SEC Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission, in one of its rare open hearings, is investigating the cost of buying and selling stocks in the United States.

In a series of hearings opening today, the SEC expects to question staff experts from the New York Stock Exchange on the minimum fee structure under which the major exchanges set the cost of buying and selling stock.

The SEC, which has held public hearings only once or twice over the last 20 years, also will check into the practice of fee splitting among major brokerage houses.

Just last week, in an apparent attempt to strengthen their planned defense of minimum commissions, the New York and American exchanges voted to eliminate fee splitting and grant a discount on fees for large transactions.

The SEC said the initial phase of its hearings will run through July and will be devoted to gathering facts on minimum rates.

In August, the SEC will turn its attention to economic and legal aspects.

Included in the first phase will be an examination into who pays the fees and commissions, how they are computed and how they are distributed and shared.

The Justice Department has challenged the entire system of minimum fees and contends they should be set by competition. If anything, a maximum fee is needed to protect investors from excessive costs, the Justice Department maintains.

In scheduling the hearings, the SEC opened the entire minimum rate schedule for scrutiny and suggested an interim reduction of fees by the New York exchange to take effect Sept. 15.

As an option the exchange could eliminate minimum fees on transactions exceeding $50,000 and open the way for cuts through negotiation between the parties.

Other national exchanges were asked to consider cuts but no deadline or specific proposals were made by the SEC. Normally, the New York exchange sets the pace for the industry.

The interim schedule proposed by the commission could result in substantial savings to investors, especially on large orders.

On a 5,000-share purchase of a $30 stock, for example, the present fee is $1,700. It would be $914 under the commission's schedule, a savings of $786.

Historic Ice House Turns Into Theater

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — A six-week stand of "Huckleberry Finn" and four other productions will begin Tuesday night in the Hannibal Ice House Theater, a new era in the many-faceted life of the old building.

A part of Hannibal's history since 1854 when Stillwell Cold Storage was established as the first ice house west of the Mississippi River, the ice house was once the home of ham.

Dressing rooms, stage and seats all occupy space now that was once devoted to Star, Sterling and Export Brands of Stillwell hams when that Missouri hog product earned recognition for this area on European and domestic tables.

Meat packing was discontinued in the building in 1912 and the sale of artificial ice, first manufactured here in 1880, and the winter storage of apples became the building's main purpose.

The plays to be produced through Aug. 10 in the renovated Ice House Theater will be directed by J.F. Severas and Alfred Srnka of the drama faculty at Northeast Missouri State College. In addition to Huckleberry Finn there will be Luv, Picnic, You Can't Take It With You, and Thurber Carnival.

Province Named Soils Commissioner

CHARLESTON -- Art Province has been named district supervisor of one of 27 new Missouri conservation districts approved by the Conservation Commission.

Each of the nine regions of the state will be divided into three districts, including from three to six counties per district.

Other southeast Missouri district supervisors are Chester Barnes of Poplar Bluff, Doyle Beck, Potosi, Earl Kinder, Van Buren, Donald J. May, Dexter.

Pronvince's district will probably include Mississippi, Scott, New Madrid and Pemiscot Counties.

Mrs. Walter M. Bush was the nation's first licensed woman driver. She got a steam engineer's license in 1900 and drove a Locomobile.

Cotton Farmers Seek Greater Market Share

MEMPHIS -- "Cotton farmers obviously are determined to fight for a greater share of the expanding market for fibers," George C. Cortright, Jr., chairman of the cotton board, said today.

As evidence, the Rolling Fork, Miss., cotton producer cited the collection to date of almost $7 million for research and promotion from the small 1967-68 cotton crop.

Cortright said funds now in transit to the board will push the collections to well above the $7-million mark. A total of $6,972,000 had been received as of June 27.

"The extremely low level of refunds -- only three per cent of collections-- strongly emphasizes the great value which cotton farmers place on research and promotion and certainly shows they are determined to compete with other fibers for markets," Mr. Cortright said.

Established under the Cotton Research and Promotion Act, the collections are on cotton sold prior to June 1, 1968.

The total represents about 95 per cent of the 7,366,000 bales of upland cotton ginned during the 1967-68 season as reported by the department of commerce, Cortright explained.

He said most of the small differences between ginnings and collections have been accounted for as: (1) in transit collections reported but not yet received; (2) assessments to be remitted by collecting handlers during July on cotton sold since June 1; and (3) cotton still held by growers on which the assessment is not yet due.

The board chairman commended producers, ginners, collecting handlers, and other branches of the industry for their excellent cooperation in behalf of the program.

"As in any effort involving a great many people there have been a few who have not lived up to the requirements of the regulations," Cortright said. "However, these are at a minimum, and appropriate steps are being taken to deal with the problem."

Despite a short crop, the net cost of operating the Cotton Board and administering the collection, accounting, and refund system during the first 15 months amounted to only one per cent of collections, Mr. Cortright said.

"This means 99 cents out of every dollar is going for an operating research and promotion program. Certainly this is efficiency at its best, and is what the sponsors of the Research and Promotion Act intended. We know growers and other industry members will be highly pleased," the Cotton Board chairman said.

He added the low operational cost points up the fact that an effective system for handling the program has been established in the first year, and commended the staff of the Cotton Board for their role in accomplishing this objective.

He stated that an additional report, giving a breakdown of collections by states, will be issued when the first year's program is more substantially complete.

The Missouri board members and his alternate are: K. M. Streeter, Painton, and Frank Stanley, Sikeston.

Southeast Missouri State Regents Plan for Buildings

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Southeast Missouri State college board of regents, discussed the Missouri legislature's appropriation of $3,402,997 to the college, planned an investment program for a scholarship fund, authorized the sale of bonds and heard reports.

Board members instructed college officials to begin preparations for the use of the capital improvements allotment, the largest such appropriation since 1960, according to college officials.

Dr. Mark F.Scully said the college will receive the money as soon as Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signs the bill.

The breakdown for State College funds includes: $2,488,920 for a power plant addition, $764,077 for a portion of an education - psychology classroom building, and $150,000 for repairs and replacements.

Dr. Scully reported bids are scheduled to be let about Jan. 1 on both the power plant project and new classroom building. The appropriation on the education-psychology building is one-third the total cost of $2,292,231. One-third was originally the federal government's part.

In other business, the board:

Planned an investment program for the Gramling fund. The money in the program, $220,000, was turned over to the St. Louis Union Trust Co. Income will be used to provide scholarships for students studying social science, government and history.

Some cars are talking big price slashes.
They know what they're worth.

Pity the poor car that doesn't become attractive until it has its price cut.
Pity it. But don't buy it.
Buy instead a car that sales figures prove is attractive all year long. Chevrolet, America's favorite. (Now all the more attractive, with special savings on V8 engines and automatic transmissions.)
A car with windshield wipers that stay out of sight until you turn them on, and an automatic alarm system that warns you not to leave your keys.

The simple truth is: we can afford to put more into each car we build, because we build more cars.
Putting you first keeps us first. See your Chevrolet dealer last, for good sound savings on all 1968 models.

HIGHLIGHTS AND SIDELIGHTS FROM YOUR STATE CAPITOL

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY COMING TO MISSOURI?

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. -- Missouri may be on the verge of moving into the national spotlight by establishing presidential primaries.

The initiative may come from two directions. An Election Law Study Commission has finished taking testimony on the idea and could make a recommendation to the next regular session of the legislature. Secondly, a statewide petition movement is trying to put the proposal on the ballot.

The study commission, which is studying several other law reforms, has not made any decisions yet. It has until the end of the year, when it will be automatically dissolved, to prepare a report.

The 16-member commission is composed of five senators, five representatives, five persons appointed by the governor, and James C. Kirkpatrick, secretary of state.

There are two types of presidential primaries -- preferential and binding. The preferential does not bind party delegates to voting for the winner of the primary elections at the national conventions.

Proponents of primaries praise them because they give the voters a choice. Sen. Omer H. Avery, (D-21st District) chairman of the commission, however, disagrees: "Most presidential primaries are not binding. They don't mean anything. They don't necessarily give the voter a choice."

Kirkpatrick, however, favors the primary because of the national attention that would be focused on Missouri. He points out that the 15 states with primaries get more attention during election years.

Avery contends the publicity is short-lived and of little value.

Whatever the recommendations of the commission, the proposal could reach the November ballot through other channels. A petition drive has been collecting signatures in the St. Louis and Kansas City areas and some outstate areas such as Cole and Boone counties. The drive is led by a citizens group called the Missouri Presidential Preference Committe.

To get the proposal on the ballot, the group must collect about 56,000 signatures (five per cent of the voters in seven congressional districts) by July 5.

The petition calls for a binding primary for all generally recognized candidates of each party to be held on the second Tuesday after the first Monday in May of an election year.

In addition to the primary proposal, the study commission has been studying voting age requirements, absentee ballot laws, uniform voting hours and statewide registration.

Making voting hours uniform would ease the burden of some election officials who now must open the polls at 7 a.m. and take in only a handful of votes for the first hour, Avery said. "The earlier hours aren't necessary because everyone gets off work for three hours on election day," he commented.

Avery also favors revision of absentee ballot laws to enable the absentee votes to be counted at the same time as other votes and statewide registration to prevent people from voting twice.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT cIS ON AUGUST 6 BALLOTS

On Tuesday, August 6th, Missourians will vote in a special election on a constitutional amendment to determine the order of succession to the governor's office in case of a vacancy.

If passed, the amendment would add four persons to the present line of succession, which consists of the lieutenant governor, president pro tempore of the senate and speaker of the house, in that order. The amendment provides that secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer and attorney general, in that order, would be next in line if the speaker of the house vacated the governor's office.

The amendment then, adds four persons to the present order of succession, providing guidelines in case of a rapid series of vacancies as might occur in a large disaster.

A vacancy in the governor's office can be caused by death, resignation, impeachment, inability to fulfill the duties or the governor's absence from the State.

The amendment also would establish two procedures for determining the inability of a governor to fulfill his duties:

(1) A governor can present a written declaration to the president pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House saying he is unable to carry on with his duties. The next in succession would take office automatically. A governor could re-gain the office by the same method if the disablility were removed.

(2) A disability board, made up of the seven persons in the line of succession plus the majority floor leaders of the Senate and the House, could, by a majority vote, have a governor removed from office for a disability. However, if a governor did not agree that he was disabled, he could appeal to the board. If the board turned himdown, the decision would be up to the Supreme Court of Missouri.

Martin Says TV Humor Catching up

By DICK MARTIN

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dick Martin, writing for both halves of the comedy team of Rowan and Martin, drops his buffoon's mask to discuss seriously the impact of humor in a mass medium. The team, successful in clubs and as television guest stars for years, have shot to the peak of success during the past season as stars of the hit NBC variety show, "Laugh-in" with its new, furiously paced format.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Why does America need more freedom in its comedy?

Let's put this question in context—in television, because, let's face it, that's where it's all happening.

As Dan and I see it, the acceleration of change in our institutions, that is both political and social, is so fast that it takes a broad stroke to paint a picture of what is happening now.

The broad stroke is comedy because it's the most devastating stroke you can use. Maybe devastating isn't the proper word, but in this sense we think it applies.

We can illustrate what is happening out there in "the real world" in a flash on television, make it burlesque, fast and explosive. You see it for what it is. That's the style of our times and finally television is catching up.

In the past, it seems to both of us, TV didn't lead, it followed. The pace was set by commercial interests and the material was written and illustrated accordingly. Now we see a change where the pace of the material is passing the commercials— and, of course, I am talking about our show.

I sound as though we're taking the credits for this but please don't misunderstand. The pace really was set a long time ago, underground, by comedians like Lennie Bruce, Jonathan Winters, Buddy Hackett and ourselves. We were all out there in the clubs popping Mary Poppins out of her tree while motion pictures were breaking down barriers in their own field.

Then came the Smothers Brothers. Thanks to their guts in relating their material directly to what youth was thinking, comedy started breaking out on television at a pace and in areas that were theretofore considered taboo. I think we came into the medium and took it all that much further.

And there's Jonathan Winters. If Winters were allowed to fly he could give us all a tremendous run for our lives. The only thing that is keeping him down is the old-fashioned format of his show. Three years ago even Winters would have been cut to pieces by the censors. I can see where he's picking up tremendous freedom as a consequence of the changing times.

But at the root of the matter lies the fact that comedy is a buffer for social changes. If you can see some humor in it, then the change becomes more palatable. We can deal with subjects in our show like race, religion, funerals, politics and motherhood—any fast evolving institution—and cut them to the bone.

How do we get away with it? Because the public is hip, because the medium is hip, the material is hip and its fast and that is exactly what is happening.

Celebrations Touched off by De Gaulle Win

PARIS (AP) — With automobile horns blaring and flags flying, Frenchmen poured into the streets of Paris Sunday night to celebrate President Charles de Gaulle's massive election victory.

Flag-decked cars packed with cheering Frenchmen surged through the Champs Elysees and other parts of Paris.

Many of the flags bore the Cross of Lorraine, which De Gaulle chose as the symbol of the Free French forces in World War II.

But not all Parisians celebrated.

In the Latin Quarter, home of the Sorbonne, university students blocked the victory parades with improvised barricades, and stoned the cars. They tore off the French tricolors and marched off waving the red portions of the flags.

It was the students of the University of Paris whose rebellion unleashed the May crisis which caused De Gaulle to dissolve the National Assembly and call the elections.

"Even the Communists must have voted for the Gaullists," said one youth outside the medical school, which is still occupied by the students.

Bombing Halt Eases Red Economic Strain

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence reports indicate North Vietnam's food problems may be easing because much of the country is free from U.S. bombing.

Analysts say there is evidence that thousands of North Vietnamese civilians, mobilized during the bombings to repair roads and railroads, are returning to farming.

U.S. reconnaissance has detected intensive farming on rice lands in the Red River Delta which lay fallow during the bombing period because, analysts said, the peasants were used to keep supply routes open.

For more than a year, North Vietnam reportedly has been sustained by wheat and wheat flour shipments, mostly from the Soviet Union.

But now there are fewer food ships arriving at Haiphong and other North Vietnamese ports, the analysts said.

Cargoes observed being unloaded in North Vietnamese ports include large tonnages of fertilizer. Meanwhile, petroleum products have returned to top place, over food, in shipments landing by sea in North Vietnam.

U.S. intelligence estimates that between 150,000 and 250,000 North Vietnamese civilians have gone back to work since the current U.S. bombing limitations went into effect March 31.

Former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara repeatedly told Congress that more than 500,000 persons had been diverted by the North Vietnamese government from farming and other jobs to maintain and repair lines of communication battered by U.S. bombs and rockets.

He cited this in an effort to show how the bombing created a burden for North Vietnam, a country which always has had a marginal food supply and only a primitive industrial system.

American intelligence officers reported some major permanent repairs to important facilities along lines of communication since President Johnson invoked the ban on U.S. bombing north of the 20th parallel.

The huge Doumer bridge, slammed repeatedly by U.S. bombers, was said to have been rebuilt and two shattered spans replaced.

Trains are starting to use the big bridge which crosses the Red River close to Hanoi. Roadbeds on the bridge have been prepared for trucks, but have not yet been surfaced.

Meanwhile, sources said, the rail lines have been adapted with an adjustable third rail. This is so freight cars can roll along the entire route through China and North Vietnam without, as in the past, requiring transshipment of the North Vietnamese border to cars of a different gauge.

LIFE-GIVING FLOW OF WATER reaches end of corn field on the George Killion farm at Portageville. A berm across end of field holds the water so that lower end gets adequate soaking before water is allowed to drain off.

Irrigation Season Starts

PORTAGEVILLE - The irrigation season has started earlier than usual in Southeast Missouri reports E. B. Nace, area farm management agent, at the Delta Center. Extreme dry weather in some spots and some corn that is earlier than usual has brought on the need for irrigation at this time. It is probable that the late April and early May plantings will need two to three irrigations.

Some corn was in full tassel on June 15th. From early tasseling to full filling of the ears is a time of critical moisture needs for corn, Nace says. For a bumper crop, corn needs either sufficient rainfall or supplemental irrigation during this period. In fact corn should be well supplied with moisture until the ears begin to turn down.

The minimum depth to irrigate corn is two feet and the maximum is three feet. This means that the soil should be wet this deep before the irrigation system is shut off. Some farmers practice irrigating every other row until the field is covered, then the system is changed to irrigate the rows that we skipped. This has two definite advantages. You can keep corn from suffering moisture stress by getting over a larger acreage in half the time and in case of a rainstorm, half the corn roots are in firm soil so that it does not blow over easily. Winds usually come in advance of rain during thunderstorms.

On average summer days, water loss from the soil by evaporation and by transpiration from the plants will be one-quarter inch. On extremely hot days when humidity is low, full-grown corn plants may take out twice this amount. Farmers should become thoroughly familiar with their soil types and the water-holding capacity of each, so that a good approximation of water needs can be worked out.

Three University of Missouri guides are available from Extension offices to help farmers with irrigation: Guide No. 1650 is "When and How Much to Irrigate"; Guide No. 1656 is "Schedule Irrigation with Evaporation Cans"; and Guide No. 1657 is "Schedule Irrigation by Keeping a Balance Sheet on Soil Moisture". These guides have information on all the crops we grow in this area.

Soybeans planted after wheat may need irrigation to get them up and off to a good start. In general, the critical period for soybeans is from full bloom through pod-filling. Beans can stand about two weeks of water stress ordinarily, but long delays will affect pod set and a water shortage during pod-filling will cut bean size.

Cotton's critical water need is from first bloom until three-fourths of the bolls you would like to have, are set. With some of our crop being late, it will be important to get bolls set as early as possible. This means that cotton should not be allowed to suffer a moisture stress during early blooming. Irrigation of cotton should normally be stopped in early August to cut down on vegetative growth so that the cotton will mature normally. Irrigations later than August 10th can lead to trouble if late August and early September rains occur.

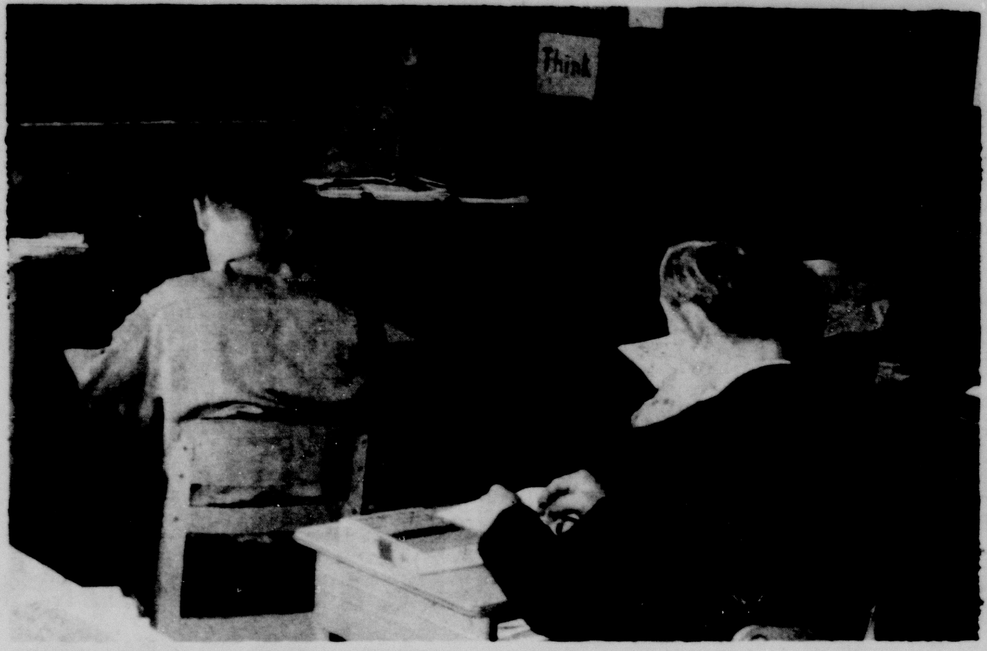
Migrant Worker Often Needs Help To Enter New Field, Earn More

By BARBARA LACY

HEADQUARTERS for Missouri Associated migrant opportunity services at Wardell.



PRICE DOUGLASS teaches a class of Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services trainees.

I went in response to a phone call from Mrs. Burt Rowe, Sr., president of United Church Women in Sikeston.

"You must come she said, "we need a Presbyterian." For it was to be an ecumenical visit to the Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services, Inc., in Wardell, which was initiated by the Missouri Council of Churches and the four Roman Catholic diocese of Missouri.

We. Mrs. David Croom, Episcopalian Mrs. W. S. Corrigan, Catholic, Mrs. C. A. Baugus Baptist, and Mrs. Rowe Methodist and myself went out of curosity. It sounded good, but what was it?

We found out at the schools main building on the western edge of Wardell, where we met the area project director, Mrs. Mary Prentice, wife of the Presbyterian minister in Malden. She had the directness and sincerity that often accompanies ministers wives.

"MAMOS" said, using the initals for a name, "is a way out of the migrant cycle. You've probably heard the figures: In 1951 only one per cent of Missouri's cotton was picked by machines. Today about 95 per cent is machine-picked. A single two-row mechanical picker replaces 70 workers.

"The problem is that the migrant has been left behind. He has little education: seventy- five percent of the MAMOS trainees have less than a second grade education. He has probably never had a pernament home or periodic attention of physicians or dentists. He has asked his family as his father did, to forego regular meals, continued schooling and new clothes to go on their yearly pilgrimage from farm to farm from state to state looking for work. He rarely stays in one spot long enough to qualify for welfare or health programs or low income housing.

"Our program has no residence requirements. Priority is given to prospective trainees with the least wage income during the previous year, those with the largest number of dependents and those with the least education.

"In fact, it is almost easier to have too much to be able to qualify than too little. For there are only three requirements for a trainee: he must have earned 50 per cent of his income from agricultural employment: he must be employed only on a seasonal basis and by more than one employer during the preceeding calendar year and he must have an income that is below the federal government's established poverty level. For a family of four, this is $3,200. Only seven of first 145 trainees had an income of $2,000 or more the previous year.

"Physically, MAMOS is made up of training centers at Maldens Gobler and Marston plus the area office and training center at Wardell. MAMOS receives its money from title 3B of the Economic Opportunity Act; the section that provides for programs of assistance to migrants, seasonal farm workers and their families. From February, 1967 to September, 1968, MAMOS will have received $835,785. One pay them $38 per week plus $5 for each dependent up to five dependents.

But it's a long way from the hoe handle to the pencil. I've seen grown men with sweat rolling down their faces as they try to get their work-hardened hands around a pencil. That's why we use these," she said, handing us half-inch thick pencils for note taking. "It makes writing a little easier.

"We believe that the migrant is not a lazy man; that he can learn what he wants to know or what he needs to know in order to relate to the problems of a fast-changing world."

There are tangible results to show that this is true: The 326 men trained since MAMOS opened in 1967 have an annual net income gain of $450,000. Only eight had an income of 2,200 or more the previous year.

Reading. writing and arithmetic plus civics and consumer education including preparatory classes for the high school equivalency examination offered by the state of Missouri are the first part of the three-fold MAMOS program. The average trainee, entering with a second grade education, is working at a fourth grade level at the end of the 23 average weeks session or about 6 months.

Recently six men passed the high school equilvancy test to receive a general education' diploma. One trainee is enrolled in a regular high school and one migrant has entered college.

"Incidently," Mrs. Prentice told us, "he was considered retarded and had never been in a regular school before.

The second part of the program is pre-employment training. Vocational training is given in automobile mechanics, body and fender work, electricity and carpentry. How to apply for a job as well as what to expect on the job is included.

"A migrant often gets a job," Mrs. Prentic said, "only to leave it within a week or so. His employer calls him shiftless. The truth is, he left because he needed money. He was used to being paid at the end of every work day. No one told him that he would be paid once a week or even once every two weeks. And he never asked. If you are afraid of people you don't ask questions."

Earnest Reed was a tractor driver last year and a good one, making $1 per hour. But the $540 he earned last year wasn't enough to support his wife and 13 children. Today he is a plumber's helper making $1.70 per hour and expects to clear $3,300 this year. He just didn't know how to make the shift to a new job.

"Isn't education being able to choose alternate routes?

To contact trainees and to work with them and their families, MAMOS employees social aides--women who were migrants themselves. They attend a continuous in-service training program to learn how to work with families. While MAMOS is working to make professionals out of them, their training is concentrated in the areas that migrant families need first: how to use commodities, how to sew, how to take care of children and personal hygiene techniques. The trainees attend home extension courses and transmit their learning to the trainees wives at small group meetings.

One of the social aides, Mrs. Lila Ruff, was our guide to the Marston school and several homes. "We're the contact between the school and the family. We try to help them with their problems, to see that the children are in school, and to contact other agencies for them, such as welfare departments, Delmo housing or the FHA. We have to work slowly, just stopping in to chit-chat for awhile at first. I have 41 families I see at least every three weeks.

Mrs. Ruff, the mother of 13 children, is an articulate spokesman for the program as well as an example of the migrants desire to help themselves.

Her biggest regret is that she quite high school to get married. She was determined to finish school but it wasn't until she had been married many years and had 11 children that she got the opportunity to finish.

Her oldest child has completed two years at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale and another daughter is ready to enter. To pay college fees her husband drives the Hayti school bus. Then to feed the family, they all followed the migrant circuit from Florida oranges to Michigan cherries and back to Missouri for cotton.

Now that she has a good job, "It's going to be easier," she said.

Many people realized that not all migrants could work out their problems like the Ruff family, and that most migrants needed to be helped. A few had even sent soap, clothing and toothpaste. But that was not enough.

In 1965 the Missouri Council of Churches and the four Roman Catholic Dioceses of Missouri were contacted by concerned individuals and urged to do something . . . After much study the vision of MAMOS was made into a corporation and in 1967 received funds from the office of economic opportunity. But the religious institutations maintained their interest, having members on the board of directors and undertaking projects to help MAMOS.

"Don't lump us in with all poverty programs, "Mrs. Prentice said firmly. "We are very sensitive about this. Only 7.7 per cent of our grant goes for administrative purposes. You can't say that about all poverty programs.

"My office is a storeroom, she added, waving a hand at the four to ceiling shelves on the south side of the room and the boxes of supplies about the floor. "You won't find a new piece of machinery in the building.

Seriously she added, "when you consider the number of people to be helped, you can't afford to be wasteful."

FORTAS AND THORNBERRY

When Chief Justice Earl Warren submitted his resignation to President Johnson, he was asked by the president whom he would recommend to take his place. The answer was "Abe Fortas."

The Chief Justice based this recommendation partly on age—Fortas is 58, which would give him 12 to 15 active years to guide the court—partly on executive ability. The work of the Chief Justice, as Warren has seen it and has so effectively carried it out, is partly that of an administrator. Under the Constitution, the Chief Justice is charged, among other duties, with administering the judicial system of the United States, and for this he is paid the maginificent sum of $500 per year.

But also he must be the administrator—and a tactful one—of the eight other, sometimes differing, justices of the Supreme Court. The manner in which the Chief Justice assigns the writing of opinions, and the manner in which he gets unanimity or fails to get it, can influence history.

For instance, Warren very carefully and tactfully waited until he could get the entire court to go along with him in the famous 1954 School Desegregation Decree. Justice Robert Jackson was the most difficult member of the court on this issue. He was the last hold-out. Justice Stanley Reed, of Kentucky, was also reluctant. Finally, after winning over Reed, Warren went to see Jackson, then in the hospital, with the final draft of the decision. Jackson had been wavering but during that hospital visit he okayed the text which made the court unanimous.

Knowing the impact on the south, Warren had been anxious that the decision be unanimous.

Fortas, as his successor, Warren told the President, would have the ability to affect and influence harmony of the court.

—FORTAS'S CLOSEST FRIENDS—

Three men have played a dominant role in the life of the new Chief Justice. One of these, Harold Ickes, his old chief in the Interior Department, is dead. The other two are William O. Douglas and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Fortas was a law student at Yale when Douglas was a member of its law school faculty. When Douglas came to Washington as a member of the securities and exchange commission staff and later a commissioner, Fortas came with him. He was Douglas' understudy.

Douglas was close to Harold Ickes, who served as Secretary of the Interior longer and more vigorously than any man in history; and he recommended Fortas to Ickes as an up-and-coming young man who could help him in his battle with the big power companies.

It was while Fortas was handling reclamation and power projects in the public works administration that a gangling young congressman from Texas walked in to get a dam built for three Texas counties on the little Colorado River. Thus began the friendship between Abe Fortas and Lyndon B. Johnson, culminating in Abe's appointment to head the Supreme Court of the United States.

It was Fortas who did some fast and effective footwork when Johnson squeaked through by 87 votes in his Senate race over Gov. Coke Stevenson. There was a flap about some of the ballot boxes and Stevenson talked about a recount. Fortas advised getting a quick ruling from Justice Hugo Black. Black, who had jurisdiction over the judiciary of the southwest, came through with a favorable ruling which made Lyndon Johnson senator from Texas. Probably it was the most crucial event in Johnson's career which later took him to the White House.

Just after Johnson squeaked through in his senate victory, he met Homer Thornberry, who had run for Congress to fill Johnson's vacant congressional seat. Thornberry had won the primary by 37 votes and asked Johnson what his margin was.

"Eighty-seven votes," replied Johnson.

"That's a landslide," remarked Thornberry.

Lyndon was on his way to his radio station in Austin, and announced that Thornberry had described his margin as a landslide. Thereafter in Texas the new senator was nicknamed "Landslide Lyndon."

Abe Fortas went on to become Under Secretary of the Interior under Harold Ickes. His friend and former teacher, Douglas, went on to become Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

Later, when Lyndon Johnson became President, his first appointment to the court was his old friend Fortas, who then joined his old teacher, Douglas. Today, with Fortas' elevation to Chief Justice, the one-time student for the first time becomes senior to his onetime teachers.

During the years, Fortas has remained intimate with his two friends, Douglas and Johnson. He is a little sensitive regarding the latter friendship, because as a member of the court he is supposed to observe the strict separation of the judiciary from the executive provided by the Constitution. Yet he has been a frequent adviser to his old friend, now president. Johnson has consulted him on a wide range of problems, from the appointment of U.S. Attorney David Bress to be a judge in the district of Columbia, to escalation of the war in Vietnam.

Fortas is extremeley touchy about published reports of this advice, and has claimed such reports were libelous.

This points to one of the chief questions on which Fortas differs with the man whom he replaces. Earl Warren had pioneered the New York Times vs. Sullivan decision exempting public officials from protection of the libel laws in most cases. Fortas has fumed over this privately and has issued one ringing dissent publicly. He gives promise of being a sensitive Chief Justice when it comes to public criticism.

Generally, Fortas will be a more conservative jurist than the man whom he replaces. He will also be more political. He will tend to adhere to the diagnosis of the fames Mr. Dooley that "the Supreme Court follows the election returns."

On the question of Constitutional freedoms, however, Fortas will be just as strong as the Chief Justice. His law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter is the only one in Washington which had the courage to defend victims of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy during the period when government officials were being terrorized by the McCarthy witch hunt. Their law firm undertook the defense of Dr. Owen Lattimore of Johns Hopkins when McCarthy branded him as a communist and, after weeks and months of battling, finally won out.

The Arnold, Fortas and Porter law firm also defended the most famous case of a government civil servant accused by McCarthy, namely Dorothy Bailey.

In both cases they worked without fee, at tremendous cost to themselves and their staff and despite some criticism from the firm's blue ribbon clients on Wall Street.

Among these blue ribbon clients havybeen corporations prosecuted by the Justice Department for antitrust violations. However, Fortas in his decisions on the court so far has been a vigorous upholder of antitrust laws.

Early in his administration President Johnson wanted to appoint Fortas as Attorney General when Bobby Kennedy stepped down, but Fortas decline. One reason was the opposition of his law firm and his wife, both of whom claimed that Abe was the chief breadwinner of the firm and of the family. Later, when Abe finally accepted Johnson's appointment to the court, Mrs. Fortas, who works under her maiden name of Carolyn Agger, has plaintively remarked that she has to be the chief breadwinner of the family. She is one of the top tax lawyers of the United States.

—CROOK'S NEMESIS—

Homer Thornberry, now elevated to the Supreme Court, will be the second Texan in history to serve on the court. President Johnson emphasized this to some of the Senate leaders from the south whom he consulted before making the Fortas-Thornberry appointments.

Tom Clark, father of Attorney General Ramsey Clark, was the only other Texan ever to serve on the Supreme Court. President Johnson pointed out to some of the southern senators that since Clark had bowed out in favor of the first Negro ever appointed to the Supreme Court, Thurgood Marshall, Texas was now due the current vacancy.

Johnson first got to know Thornberry when the latter was a crusading young Attorney in Austin, where, as the President has said, "he drove all the crooks out of town."

The President quotes the late speaker Sam Rayburn as describing Thornberry as "the ablest member of Congress he knew." And since Rayburn also thought very highly of the young Texan who now serves as President of the United States, this was a real compliement.

As a member of the rules committee Thornberry was a staunch upholder of the New Deal and a battler for liberal legislation. He left an important hole on the rules committee which Lyndon Johnson worried about when President Kennedy appointed Thornberry as U.S. district judge in Austin.

World's Biggest Plane Receives Passing Grade

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — The successful flight of the world's biggest airplane proves there are practically no limits to construction of bigger planes, says Tom May, president of Lockheed-Georgia Co. But he says the world isn't ready for them.

The C5 Galaxy flew its first test flight Sunday. Although there were minor troubles, the Air Force and Lockheed-Georgia called the flight highly successful.

The C5 is being developed for the Air Force. Basically, it is a military plane, but the design can be changed to make it a commercial airplane.

May said, "We have preliminary plans for airplanes weighing over a million pounds. But it is fairly clear that the world is not quite ready for a commercial airplane of this size."

The C5 will carry 350 troops and all of their equipment. This one weighed 497,000 pounds on takeoff but is designed for more than 700,000 pounds.

"We like to talk about a commercial plane similar to the C5 which could carry nearly 1,000 passengers," May said at a news conference, "but the idea of carrying people on the flight deck, and freight in the hold, is extremely attractive to us."

May predicted that when the C5 becomes a commercial airplane, it probably will be used first as a freighter.

Future passenger jets will travel at speeds of between 1,500 and 2,000 miles an hour, and May said the relatively slow speed of the C5 would be a handicap in a passenger airplane.

Faith Baldwin

--'Very Happy but Longing to Die'

RINGWOOD, England (AP) — Nearly three decades since quitting the convent after finding a nun's life unbearable, best-selling author Monica Baldwin says today:

"I'm very, very happy—but longing to die."

Now in her seventies, the woman who wrote "I Leap Over the Wall" is writing her autobiography and putting her affairs in order "so I won't be too much trouble to my executors."

"Death is the greatest experience of all," she says. "We know absolutely nothing about it. For me it means two great doors opening from darkness to blazing inaccessible light. It's that I'm waiting for."

Miss Baldwin still sees this world as a pretty awful place and London as "a cesspool." She lives quietly alone on the edge of the New Forest, more than 100 miles from the capital, because "though not a pious person, I find God so much more satisfying than man."

A cousin of Stanley (later Earl) Baldwin, who was three times Britain's prime minister between the wars, she was brought up as an Anglican but became a Roman Catholic convert when 17. She entered a strictly enclosed order of contemplative nuns as a Canoness Regular of the Lateran of St. Augustine before World War I. She came out 28 years later on October 26,1941, during World War II.

She still feels herself a Rip Van Winkle.

"My standards are pre-1914," she says. "We were completely cut off. Why, I didn't even know the names of the generals in the first war."

Her best-selling book, based on the Baldwin family motto Per Deum meum transilio murum (By the help of God I leap over the wall), tells something of that strange awakening to the world.

"I had not been more than a few hours out of the convent when I realized that I didn't know the first thing about modern life," she wrote. "I'd never even heard of the authors, athletes, film stars, politicians, whose names were news."

The power and speed of the modern world overwhelmed her. Her eyes goggled at women wearing short skirts, women smoking, at the lacy scanty lingerie which had replaced the stout underwear of her own schooldays.

"I was," she said then, "a potential grandparent with the outlook and mind of a pre-1914 schoolgirl."

In a sense, she says, she is still trying to catch up.

Today, in her trim beige two-piece knit-suit, with her gray hair short and neatly curled in modern style, there are moments when she still reflects the religious life. There is her obvious inner serenity, her calm way of talking, the folded hands, the occasionally downcast eyes. Twenty-eight years of obedience to a Rule still show.

Miss Baldwin recalls that religious life of obedience as "giving yourself as completely as possible short of death."

FAITH BALDWIN
She climbed the wall

BEYOND THE WALL

"It is the nearest thing to death without drying or it means nothing," she said the other day. "If you don't do that then the whole thing has no sense."

She described her motives in first entering the convent as mixed.

"I think I really wanted to save a soul," she said simply, adding: "Not some young man's soul—my mother's."

But, after giving herself to God, Miss Baldwin said she started to do a stupid and mean thing.

"I started taking myself back. I started saying: 'I've made a mistake. I've given more than I intended.'

"So, instead of living by the vow of obedience, you start taking back—oh little things at first. For example, you do what your superiors say but you start having mental reservations about it. This can lead to temptation when the big thing comes along. Then you start living according to your own sweet will. And every infidelity thickens the veil between God and yourself."

Miss Baldwin said she thought that, as they are now brought up, the life of a contemplative nun was impossible for the young girls of today unless they were of the stamp of a St. Teresa or a St. Catherine of Siena.

"Of course, things have changed a lot now," she said. "I hear they've taken down the grills in my old convent. And the voluminous 14th century clothes, so impractical, have been replaced by the most ghastly raiment today.

"But don't get the idea that I'm against the convent life for some. I'm still pro-convent."

Yet she's not too happy about the state of the Church today.

"I think nothing but persecution and a few martyrdoms will make us realize what our faith should really be," she said. "We're much too complacent. We're half-hearted, tepid,second-rate."

Asked if she traced any parallel between her own renunciation of her vows and the action of Father Charles Davis, the Roman Catholic theologian who gave up the priesthood and left the Church to marry, Miss Baldwin said:

"I think self-seeking in some form was behind the action of us both. It could be self-importance, self-interest, self-indulgence, self-love, self-pity. The only cure is prayer."

Prayer is something the former nun feels strongly about.

"The world is amuck today because people don't pray,"she said. "They say their prayers—some of them—but they don't really pray. Prayer has got to be worked at like golf or cricket or ballet dancing or anything else you seek to perfect. If only people would work at prayer as they do at their golf, it would be a better world."

What shocks her most in today's swinging Britain is the corruption—"and I don't mean just in sexual behavior"—the dishonesty, the awful cruelty and the grabbing after money.

Television, she says, constantly puts the wrong images before the eyes of the people. The resulting materialism is worse than in the Renaissance.

Decor Italian-Style

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — You know how Italian film makers like to bare the functional yet aesthetic framework of their actresses?

Well, a lot of Italian design is in the same philosophical mold.

"Real design is concerned with everything, from the beginning," explained Ludovico Magistretti. "For example, at home when we make a stereophonic unit we never try to hide it—in bookcases, in cabinets. We want to have it always open. The professional engineering is a part of the design."

Magistretti is a 48-year-old architect-designer from Milan who, with half a dozen other Italian designers were on hand for the opening of the exhibit "Design Italian Style" at the Hallmark Gallery. The show will close July 18. As the most fluent in English, Magistretti was called upon to talk most of the time.

Politely, he gave the United States its due.

"American design has great merit," he said. "Real industrialized design began here. But now the big difference is in what is rightly called industrial design and what is stylism. The majority of American work is stylism and not design. You Americans always take care to cover something with something, to put skin to hide something."

In the New York show are furniture, fabrics, kitchen utensils, plastics, automobile models, lighting fixtures and ceramics. In each object the designer's personality and viewpoint emerges, yet, Magistretti said, "there's a similarity of thinking that we don't realize before we design."

Italian is far from being as definite a style as Danish,which he doesn't much admire. "The Danish are clever with wood," he conceded. "But it's so formalized."

A third-generation architect, Magistretti mainly designs buildings.

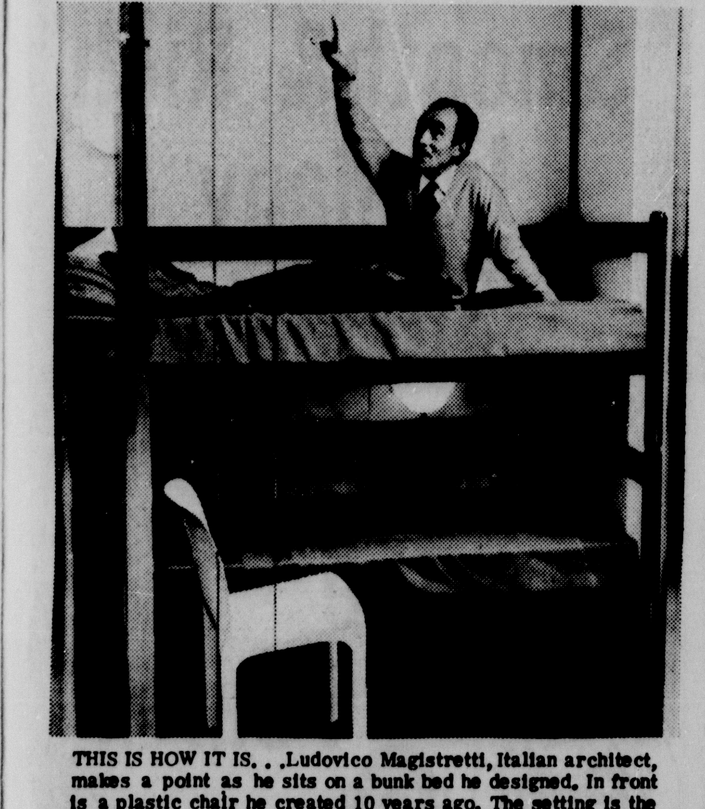
"But in my spare time I design these things." He waved a hand at a bunk bed he designed four years ago for his son "because I didn't find a good one to put in my house," a group of stack tables in bright primary colors and a molded plastic chair.

"I make sketches, but I never like to give a design and say 'do this.' It quite often must be changed. So I work along with the workmen, making changes as we go.

"Take this chair, made from a leaf of plastic. I had to mold it with my fingers.Plastics is a very interesting field, and with plastics we can meet the largest demand. Good craftsmen skilled in working with wood are getting harder to find and good wood furniture is going to be terribly expensive in the future."

He nodded at the chair again. "This plastic is not cheap. It's good stuff. To make the steel mold I had to work with tools and hands. The cost of the mold for this chair was $30,000. But we can produce one chair, ready to put into the carton for shipping, in three minutes."

Commercial distribution is difficult, he said. "But what is important is to penetrate something with new objects, to get people used to a new taste.That's the social side of our work, if you can call it that."



THIS IS HOW IT IS. . .Ludovico Magistretti, Italian architect, makes a point as he sits on a bunk bed he designed. In front is a plastic chair he created 10 years ago. The setting is the Hallmark Gallery in New York, where the "Design Italian Style" exhibit is being held.

Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals, later became king of Sweden as Charles XIV.

The word nicotine is derived from the name of Jean Nicot, who introduced tobacco into France in 1560.

Rolwing Opposed To Federal Gun Control Proposal

CHARLESTON -- State Rep. David Rolwing, a candidate for the tenth district Democratic nomination for Congress, today announced his opposition to proposed federal gun control legislation pending in Washington.

Rolwing, honored this year as the outstanding conservationist in the house of representatives by the Conservation Federation of Missouri, attacked what he said is the "mood of hysteria" over gun control legislation which has developed since the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Rolwing pointed out that California, where Kennedy was killed, has stringent gun registration laws, but said these were of no help in preventing the murder. "New laws will no more prevent violence and murder than prohibition laws were able to prevent consumption of alcohol. If a man wants a murder weapon, he will be able to get one," Rolwing said.

The Charleston legislator said he is particularly opposed to he proposed national registration of rifles and shotguns, the so-called "long guns." The majority of these weapons, Rolwing said, are in the hands of sportsmen, who have a legitimate reason for owning them. "There is no need to harass these legitimate gun users by adding a lot of red tape in the form of registration procedures."

Rolwing said, however, that he does favor severe restrictions on mail order and interstate shipment of small, concealable hand weapons, such as the .22 calibre pistol used by the killer of Senator Kennedy.

Rolwing said he believes the rising tide of violence in America may be attributed to many factors other than lack of a national gun registration law. Among these factors, he said, are the morbid portrayal of violent death on television and in movies, and the lack of moderation shown in the publications and speeches of various extremist organizations.

$144 Million Budget for M. U. Approved

COLUMBIA -- The total current operating budget of $144,023,731 for fiscal 1968-69 for the University of Missouri has been approved by the board of curators, President John C. Weaver announced. The budget, which covers the four campuses and University-wide operations, compares with the estimated 1967-68 total of $124,288,237.

President Weaver said that the general operating budget, which does not include funds for restricted operations, amounts to $107,480,035. The restricted operations amounting to $36,543,696 cover such areas as outside sponsored research, other sponsored programs, scholarships and fellowships, and auxiliary enterprises. Auxiliary enterprises covers intercollegiate athletics, residence halls, bookstores, etc.

Ann Landers

Preacher's Generous Act Called Dangerous, Dumb

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having a problem with my husband. Please don't suggest I talk it over with my clergyman. He is my clergyman.

Here's what happened: Last month "Mr. Greatheart" gave his gasoline credit card to a woman I've never seen. Her husband is in jail. Nowadays people can buy just about everything under the sun with a gas credit card. I was stunned that he would allow a woman such privileges.

The woman phoned two weeks ago and asked me what to do with the credit card now that she had found a job. I handed the phone to my husband. He instructed her to mail it to him. (This was how I learned of it.)

Two weeks have passed and the card has not arrived. My husband doesn't know where the woman is or which credit card he gave her.

We've been married 20 years and have four children. Our life has been one endless financial struggle. I am hurt and shocked. What do you make of this? --- WEARY

Dear Weary: If you suspect hanky-panky, forget it. No woman would ask the wife of a man with whom she'd been fooling around what to do with his credit card -- unless she is crazy, that is.

When your clergyman receives the bill he should cancel the card and keep a record of the woman's charges -- in case she would like to repay him one of these days. Your husband probably thought he was being generous, but in my opinion it was a dumb and dangerous thing to do.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing in to the mother who found goofballs in her son's pocket. He said he was using them to stay awake studying for college exams.

When I was in undergraduate school I, too, relied on "bennies" -- until one day I worke up feeling very strange. I discovered my heartbeat was 166. I was frightened out of my wits and went immediately to our family doctor. He gave me some invaluable advice which I'd like to pass on.

It seems the doctor was an Air Force pilot in World War II. The medics used to give the pilots artificial stimulants for long-distance bombing raids. They stopped, however, when the casualty rate increased. They discovered those artificial stimulants did funny things to a pilot's judgment, vision and space perception. The pilots were ordered to lay off the bennies and to take 10- or 15-minute naps when they felt the need for a boost.

I tried the pilot-doctor's suggestion and it worked splendidly. I was able to study efficiently for about 18 hours out of a 24-hour period. My grades improved and I had to admit that the cramming I had done on "bennies" had not produced the high marks I'd hoped for.

Pass the word, will you, Ann? I spent nine years in college and fried just about everything the students are trying now, so I ought to know. --- COLORADO PROF

Dear Prof: Consider it passed. A word from one who has made the scene packs a much harder wallop. And thanks for the lesson, Prof. Those who listen will go to the head of the class.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents ....if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

By Jack Strauss,
LL.B.

Finley loved motorboat races and could go anywhere to participate in one. One day, while on a strange river, and while warming up his boat just prior to a race, he suddenly went shooting off into space, over a dam, at 50 mph.

A practical person, and with no place to go but down, Finley immediately began saying his prayers. Holding his nose as he hit the water below, he sued the owner of the dam for his injuries when he finally glob-globbed to the surface.

"He can't hold me responsible," protested the owner. "I didn't tell Finley to go shooting over my dam."

"Believe me," was Finley's answer. "I didn't do it on purpose. If I had known the dam was there, I would have worn a parachute instead of a life preserver. Signs should have been posted and other precautions taken to warn people that the darn dam was there. Not to have done so was pure negligence."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dam owner pay Finley for his injries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the only rational inference to be drawn is that the accident was due solely to Finley's irrational deference to where he was going on an unfamiliar river at 50 mph. Therefore, his own carelessness bars any recovery for his injuries.

Kennedy Book Growing in Popularity

The new close-to-the-news book, TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY: THE STORY OF THE KENNEDYS, now in production for this and other member newspapers of The Associated Press, has increased in size even before going to press.

It is being expanded from 190 to 224 large-size pages to accommodate the wealth of information and the fine pictures available in color and in black and white. There is no increase, however, in the special $3 price at which the book may be obtained through this newspaper.

Since TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY is a polished production by some of the best writers and most skillful editors in the world's largest news gathering organization, there has been no thought of making it an "instant" slapdash publication. The volume's scope, covering not just the assassination of Senator Kennedy but the whole dramatic story of the Kennedy family from poverty to power and tragedy, would foreclose that. Nevertheless, first books are still expected to come off the press by the middle of next month, a remarkable accomplishment for a publication of this caliber.

About 600 AP newspapers are cooperating in this public service project, and nearly 200,000 of the books have been spoken for already. Translation into a dozen foreign languages also is expected.

If you have not yet reserved your copy, we suggest you send your check at once to "Triumph and Tragedy" in care of The Daily Sikeston, Mo. Standard. Box 66, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. 12601.

Prospects Bright for Lower Fiscal Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with higher taxes and a congressional mandate to cut spending, the federal government headed into a new fiscal year today with the prospect of compiling its smallest deficit in three or perhaps four years.

The budget deficit in the fiscal year which ended at midnight Sunday ran to about $25 billion by the administration's own estimate—the fourth largest in history.

President Johnson gave the government its deficit-cutting tools last Friday when he signed the 10 per cent income tax surcharge and accepted at the same time the $6 billion in spending cuts he doesn't want.

Americans will begin paying higher taxes in paychecks withholding after July 13.

The tax boost and spending cut could drop the deficit for the new fiscal year to as low as $2.5 billion if present spending estimates remain unchanged, an unlikely prospect.

The government last ran a deficit that low in fiscal 1965 at $1.1 billion. The red ink rose to $3.7 billion in 1966 and to $8.8 billion in the fiscal year which ended one year ago.

The only official word from the administration is that the deficit in the new year should move to well below the $8 billion projected last January.

Spending for the Vietnam war at about $27 billion caused the large deficit in the fiscal year just ended. War costs are now figured at about $28.4 billion in the new fiscal year.

Only three World War II deficits were higher. All totaled more than $50 billion, with the one in 1943 reading $57.4 billion.

In the last fiscal year, total spending is expected to hit between $175 and $180 billion when all the figures are compiled in about three to four weeks. Revenue can be expected to total about $153 billion.

Last January, Johnson figured spending in the new fiscal year at $186 billion but since then the cost of the war hiked another $2.6 billion and Congress ordered the $6 billion cut in non-war costs.

The tax package signed last Friday—which also includes a speed-up in collection of corporate taxes and extension of the 10 per cent excise tax on telephone service and 7 per cent excise on automobiles—will increase tax collections this year by more than $15 billion.

Fiscal 1968 just ended was the eighth straight deficit year. The last surplus came in fiscal 1960 at $213 million.

When Johnson submitted his budget to Congress last January, he envisioned a $19.8 billion deficit in the year just ended and an $8 billion deficit in the new year.

Because of the continuing deficits, the federal debt has jumped to about $350 billion.

Rooster Outcrows 115 Other Entries

ROGUE RIVER, Ore. (AP) — TE-Bird won the 16th annual Rogue River Rooster Crow by crowing 63 times in 30 minutes to the delight of about 3,000 spectators.

TE-Bird, owned by Floyd Fitch of Grants Pass, Ore., took a commanding lead early in the competition against 115 other roosters from all over the state. One rooster who finished well back in the pack was entered by Navy Lt. Brian D. Remer, serving aboard the USS Ranger off the coast of Vietnam.

Gov. Tom McCall's entry, Call-Me-Tom, turned in a less than spectacular 23 crows, but old-timers said it was a record for gubernatorial roosters.

The most crows ever recorded in a 30-minute contest period at Rogue River was 109 by Beetlebaum in 1953.

Oran Man Shot in Chest

BENTON -- Jessie McClinton, 42, of Oran is reported in poor condition at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, suffering from a gunshot wound in the chest.

Sheriff John Dennis said his office was called at 3 p.m. Sunday to investigate the shooting.

Witnesses said McClinton and J. T. Woods, a resident of the Sands area south of Benton near Morley, were at Turner's Tavern in Hayward City.

Witnesses said McClinton went over to the Woods car and hit Woods on the head with a beer bottle.

Woods went home, got a pistol and went to the McClinton home to wait for McClinton, Sheriff Dennis said. When McClinton arrived home, he was shot.

Woods put McClinton in his car and drove back to the tavern, where law officers were called, Sheriff Dennis said.

Charges were not immediately filed.

Beer, Cash Taken in Burglary

GRANT CITY --A burglary at the Anchor Inn early Sunday netted thieves about $60 in cash and four cases of beer, Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said.

Frank Null, owner of the 3.2 beer tavern, told Dennis he closed the tavern at 1:15 a.m. Sunday and discovered the breakin at 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

All coin machines had been broken into and four cases of beer were missing.

Entrance was gained by prying the lock on the front door.

Woman Killed by Gunshot

CONRAN -- Minnie Jenkins, about 50, was shot and killed Sunday at 10 p.m. authorities accused her husband, Booker T. Jenkins, 59, of killing he in the Jenkins home on the Bob Pardon farm, one mile east of here.

According to officers, Jenkins, who had been drinking, was asleep, and awoke to find James Trumbull sitting in a chair in another room, talking to his wife.

Trumbull was shot in the right side with a single barrell shotgun. The gun was reloaded. Perkin's wife, who was standing near a door was shot.

The charge struck Jenkins' wife in the head. She died instantly.

Court Fee Bills May Be Revived

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Three bills raising court fees in St. Louis got a new chance in the Missouri Legislature today.

The bills were killed last week by the Senate Committee on Municipal Corporations on a 4-5 vote. But at the request of Mayor A. J. Cervantes, Sen. Japser M. Brancato, D-Kansas City, the chairman, agreed to reconvene his committee today to reconsider the measures.

If passed, they would raise court fees by about $300,000 this year and $600,000 in subsequent years.

Opponents charged some of the increases were too great and would have the effect of denying justice to the little man, especially in small civil suits.

Cervantes said unless the bills are passed the city's financial straits will be so desperate some employes will have to be laid off.

Both houses had planned to adjourn the special session late today. But if the bills are revived, Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters, D-Liberty, said he would reconvene the Senate to consider them Tuesday.

The House adopted a "wait and see" attitude until after the Senate acts.

Final adjournment had been scheduled for 5 p.m. until the St. Louis bill got a second chance.

Matthews Outlaws Livestock, Fireworks

MATTHEWS -- Ordinances prohibiting keeping livestock within 400 feet of any residence, outlawing the sale or shooting of fireworks within the city limits and leaving junked motor vehicles on property or streets within the city limits have been passed by the city council.

Conviction on violation of the livestock ordinance carries a maximum penalty of $100 fine, six months in city jail or both.

The board of aldermen reserves the right to license an organization to hold fireworks exhibits within the city limits.

Maximum penalty on conviction of violating the fireworks ordinance is $100, 10 days in jail or both.

The junked motor vehicle ordinance requires the violator to remove the vehicle within seven days of being notified by the city marshal. When the owner's name is unavailable the city marshall is authorized to remove it to city property for storage and eventual disposal if the owner does not claim it within 15 days of removal.

Maximum penalty for violation is $100 fine, 30 days in city jail or both.

U.S. Plane Forced to Land on Soviet Island

WASHINGTON (AP) — An airliner carrying 214 U.S. servicemen to Vietnam is being held today on a Soviet island in the Pacific Ocean after being forced to land by MIG fighters.

The chartered DC-8 was on its way to Vietnam from McChord Air Base in Seattle, Wash., Sunday when, the U.S. government said, it strayed off course and was forced to land on Iturup Island, a part of the Kuril chain in the northern Pacific.

The State Department immediately contacted the Soviet embassy in Washington and urged the quick release of the plane, its passengers and the 17 crewmen.

A Japanese air force radar station said it began tracking the plane at 7:30 p.m. EDT Sunday and warned the pilot he was on a course that would cross the Soviet-held island.

The pilot replied, "We cannot alter our course," Japanese sources said, indicating the plane already was under MIG escort.

The sources said the plane was tracked another five minutes before it disappeared from radar screens at a position about 30 miles south of Iturup Island.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson said in Moscow he was told by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and First Deputy Foreign Minister Vsily V. Kuznetsov the incident is under investigation.

The Pentagon said the pilot of the chartered Seaboard-World Airlines jet, Joseph Tosolini, talked by radio with another American aircraft during the incident.

According to the Pentagon, the pilot of the Seaboard plane reported about 7:20 p.m. that MIG fighters had intercepted him and was forcing him to land at what appeared to be a MIG base on an island.

At 7:39 p.m., the Pentagon said, the Seaboard plane radioed that it had landed without injury to anyone on board and without damage to the plane.

The last transmission was at 7:42 p.m. when the pilot reported he had shut off his engines, the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department, in announcing that the plane had been forced to land, said the aircraft, chartered from Seaboard by the Military Airlift Command, had strayed off its course enroue to Yokota, Japan.

In New York, headquarters for Seaboard-World, a spokesman for the charter line said the crew had flown the route several times and "we don't see how it could have been off course, unless there were some extraordinary factors."

Seaboard identified the rest of the crew as Henry Treger, copilot; Earl Scott, flight engineer and Lawrence Guernon, navigator.

The plane also carried several in-flight checkers and stewardesses.

Plan for Area Okayed

MALDEN -- The executive committee of the Bootheel regional planning commission has approved a comprehensive development plan for the Bootheel area.

Pat Lea of Sikeston, chairman of the planning commission, advised members of the committee that it was necessary for the commission to adopt and approve a plan in order for community projects to be approved by the housing and urban development office in Fort Worth.

Hurshel Crass, Jefferson City, of the community affairs department stated that several projects were being held up in the Forst Worth office pending the approval of the plan by the commission.

He reported that projects from New Madrid, East Prairie, Bloomfield, Steele, Dexter, Morehouse and Marston are in the Fort Worth office.

One Killed in Car-Truck Crash

Five other persons are injured, two are in critical condition.

Treaty Signed Jointly

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Johnson announced today that the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to start talks "in the nearest future" on limiting offensive and defensive nuclear missiles systems.

Johnson chose the occasion of the signing of the historic nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty at the White House to make his announcement.

White House officials reported 51 nations were joining the pact, to ban the spread of atomic weapons.

Signing ceremonies were conducted also in London and Moscow.

Hours before President Johnson spoke, Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin announced in Moscow that the Soviet Union wants to hold international talks on disarmament, including a halt in the manufacture of nuclear weapons and reduction of nuclear weapon stockpiles.

Kosygin also proposed discussions on limitation and reduction of "means of delivery of strategic weapons."

The premier attacked the United States. He said the need to eliminate foreign military bases, one of the Russian proposals, "is convincingly proved by the continued aggressive war of the U.S.A. in Vietnam."

In London, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, presiding at the signing ceremony there, called the treaty: "The most important measure of arms control and disarmament on which agreement has yet been reached."

Wilson pledged that Britain would continue "with renewed confidence and renewed hope to work for further advances in disarmament." Johnson, in his remarks, referred to the long U.S. effort to start discussions on cutting back the costly nuclear arms race. Moscow had indicated last Thursday that the Soviets were finally ready for such talks.

"At this moment of achievement and hope," the President said, "I am gratified to be able to report and announce to the world a significant agreementan agreement I have actively sought and worked since January 1964.

Kosygin Calls for Talks to Ban Underground Tests

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin told signers today of a treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons that the Soviet Union is ready to hold international talks on banning underground tests, the last remaining area for the trial explosion of atomic arms.

Kosygin said the talks could extend to the ending of nuclear weapons manufacture and the reduction of nuclear stockpiles. He also proposed discussions on the "The limitation and subsequent reduction of means of delivery of strategic weapons."

As Kosygin spoke, the Seismological Institute at Uppsala, Sweden, registered a strong "underground explosion" in the Soviet Union north of the Caspian Sea. It rated it at 6.6 on the Richter scale.

Kosygin's brief speech came at the Nonproliferation Treaty signing ceremony here. Similar ceremonies were conducted in London and Washington.

The Russians also proposed discussions on "The limitation and subsequent reduction of means of delivery of strategic weapons."

The Soviet premier's proposal to talk about reducing the longrange rockets, bombers and submarines which can deliver nuclear bombs was given added urgency by a report from Communist sources in Moscow that Red China has developed its first intercontinental ballistic missile.

Kosygin said the Soviet government sent a memorandum to all other governments with nine proposals for disarmament and peaceful cooperation.

The proposals also included prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, a proposal the Russians have made many times before.

Construction Under Way on $4 Million Shopping Center

Officers of the Kingsway Plaza, Inc., a $4 million shopping center under construction on South Kingshighway, south of the intersection of Murray Lane, announced today the schedule of construction and the names of three of five major firms on which leases have been signed.

George Staples Jr., president of Kingsway Plaza, and Don Evans, secretary-treasurer, both of Charleston, made the announcement in a news conference in the community room of the First National Bank of Sikeston.

The center is to be located on a 31.5 acre tract on the southwest corner of South Kingshighway and Murray Lane. It is to be an air conditioned, enclosed mall-type center containing approximately seven acres under roof, with parking space provided for 2,424 automobiles.

Major tenants of the center include: J.C. Penney & Co. with 78,713 square feet; J.J. Newberry with 40,500 square feet; Safeway Supermarket with 17,232 square feet; plus a drive-in facility for the First National Bank of Sikeston.

Dearmont Oliver & Sons of Charleston is the contractor for clearing and grading of the property. The initial clearing began June 24. It is expected to be readied for actual building construction by Aug. 1, Staples said.

Tri State Steel Builders, Inc. of Charleston is the prime building contractor. Leon DuVall, Charleston, executive vice president of Tri State, attended the conference today.

Construction on the Penney building will start first as soon as the ground is readied probably by Aug. 1, Staples said.

Then, construction will start on the Newberry store, then Safeway and then the center complex. The five major stores on which leases have been signed are expected to be ready for occupancy by Oct. 1, 1969, Staples said.

A national chain drug store presently is being negotiated with for the center and it possibly will be ready for occupancy by October, 1969, Staples said.

The outside completion date for entire center complex is slated for Oct. 1, 1970, Staples said.

The center, as planned now, will contain a total of 36 individual stores. Negotiations are proceeding with a theater to be built near the Penney Co. in the complex. If the theater is built, it would eliminate space for six of the smaller store places in the plans now, Staples said.

The other stores include drug stores, shoe stores and speciality shops.

In addition to the five major stores, leases have been signed on two smaller stores, Staples said.

Staples said a news release could be expected within the next 10 days on the two other major stores in the complex. They will be a variety store and a department store, he said.

This center has been two years in the planning and developing and as a result, Sikeston will have the most modern shopping complex available, Evans said.

The most important changes in plans disclosed today and those announced a year ago was the need to modify leases on the major stores in respect to commencement dates and completion dates, Staples said.

For esthetic purposes, the mall is being designed to contain fountains and shrubbery. It will be possible to shop in all 36 stores without leaving the comfort of the air conditioned mall, Evans said.

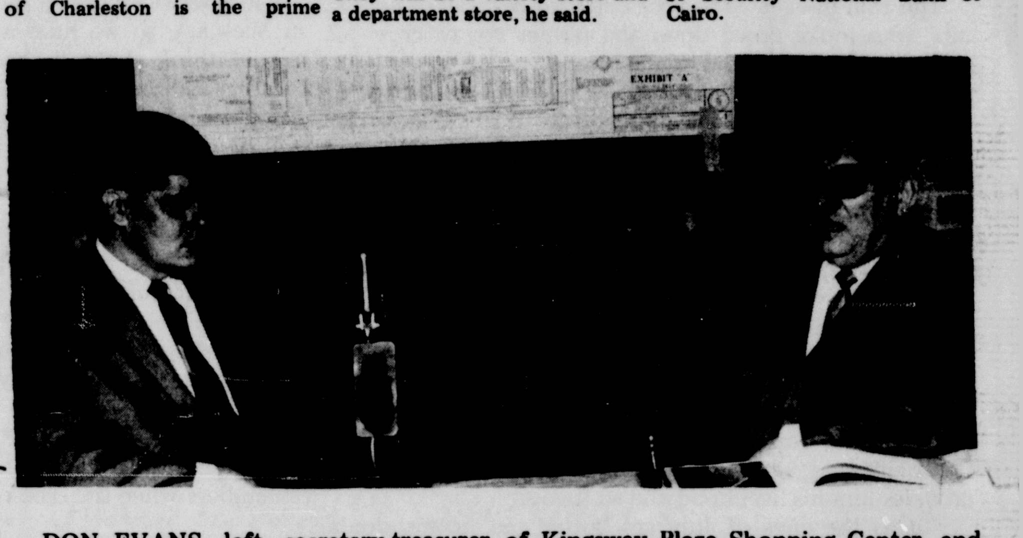
"With major industry moving into the area and hundreds of new jobs being created, a center of this size will establish Sikeston as the retail trading center for all of southeast Missouri," Staples said.

Kingsway Plaza will not only serve as a regional trading center, but will give employment to approximately 350 persons, thus it will be another major industry for Sikeston, Staples noted.

The architects are Gordon and Wilson, A.I.A. of St. Louis. The leasing agent is Staples Real Estate and Loan Company of Charleston.

Staples was the leasing agent for the Town Plaza Shopping Center in Cape Girardeau, and shopping centers in Popar Bluff and Columbia.

Evans, formerly a bank examiner here, is vice president of Security National Bank of Cairo.



DON EVANS, left, secretary-treasurer of Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center, and George Staples Jr., right, president, both of Charleston, announced today the construction schedule of five major stores on which leases have been signed. The five major stores are expected to open in October of 1969.

Penney, Newberry Tell of Plans for New Stores

Company officials for the J.C. Penney Co. and the J.J. Newberry Co. announced today details of plans for the stores to open in the Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center.

Officials of both companies said the openings are based on a confidence in Sikeston's potential as a major shopping area in Southeast Missouri.

Penney has decided to move ahead with a plan to build a 67,140-square-foot department store in the shopping center, according to Stan Bush, store manager.

The store will be a single level structure of 64,080 square feet and have an equipment penthouse of 3,060 square feet. Penney's present store on New Madrid and Front streets will close with the opening of the new shopping center facility.

Penney's Kingsway Plaza store will offer a wide selection of the chain's private-brand hard lines and a full assortment of fashion apparel. The spaciousness of the new building will make it possible for a wider range and greater selection of merchandise than was previously available in the downtown store.

In keeping with its policy of offering customers one-stop shopping service, the store will have an 8,478 square foot auto center providing full car servicing and complete assortment of the company's new, foremost private-brand tires, batteries and auto accessories. The ten-car bay, free standing facility will offer Sikeston motirists full front-to-rear overhaul and repair work. A main feature of the auto center will be Penney's Foremost brand gasoline.

The building will measure 180 by 356 feet and will be air-conditioned throughout.

Announcing plans for construction of the new Penney store, V.O. Lindstrom, regional Penney manager from St. Louis, said:

"We are pleased about this new store because it will enable Penney's to do a better job of bringing quality merchandise, low prices and friendly service to Sikeston and surrounding communities. This new store is evidence of our faith in the future of Sikeston and of Missouri generally.

"The new Penney store will offer a full assortment of soft lines and ready-to-wear for which the Penney Company has long been famous."

In addition, Penney's Kingsway Plaza store will carry a large selection of Penncrest appliances, decorative home furnishings, housewares, sporting goods, toys and outdoor equipment.

"Layout of merchandise in the new store will be arranged to present complete lines by style, size, price and color for easy shopping," Lindstrom added.

The store will have flourescent lighting with items of special interest spotlighted to emphasize color and details. Warm pinks and beiges will decorate women's fashion departments, lively colors will please the younger set. Men's and boys' departments will be set off by stronger colors associated with active living.

Directional signs and department markers will be used to pinpoint the location of merchandise. Straight, wide aisles will permit customers to shop the entire store in a single visit. High ceilings will add to the effect of spaciousness.

The Newberry department store will offer more than 50 merchandise catagories. They include family wearing apparel, fashion accessories, shoes, infant's wear, domestics, housewares, fabrics, hardware, paints, toys, toiletries, sporting goods, luggage and appliances grouped and displayed as complete shops within the larger framework of the store.

The concept of shops within a shop makes selection easier and saves customers' shopping time, John J. Newberry Jr., vice president, said.

Cashier stations and store layout will be engineered to give the greatest possible customer convenience.

In addition, a modern and efficiently equipped coffee shop will serve moderately priced meals and snacks.

Because constant high quality of all merchandise is of primary importance, a quality control department and testing laboratory is maintained in the company's New York City distribution center.

"In our efforts to insure merchandise performance, our laboratory testing methods are designed to simulate consumer use as nearly as is possible," said D. D. Milius, New York, senior vice president in charge of all merchandise in the chain.

THE COYOTES' NIGHT TO HOWL

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Count one for the coyotes in the hills near here. The Pasadena board of directors has turned down a proposed ordinance that would have permitted the trapping of coyotes in the Anandale-Linda Vista-San Rafael hills. Some residents had complained that coyotes were killing dogs and cats. But friends of the coyotes wrote 100 letters, saying that the beasts help keep down rodents, that steel traps are cruel and dangerous and that the coyote population is a colorful heritage of the west.

B52s Make Viet North Raids

SAIGON (AP) -- American B52 bombers raided North Vietnam today for the first time in nearly two months and also dropped thousands of tons of explosives on secret Viet Cong bases in the provinces around Saigon.

Twenty-five of the U.S. Air Force's biggest bombers streaked over the northern half of the demilitarized zone and the southernmost part of North Vietnam to bomb coastal artillery sites which have been shelling U.S. destroyers and cruisers operating off the coast.

The key strike inside North Vietnam was around Cape Lay, 11 miles above the allied base at Gio Linh.

The B52s last attacked inside North Vietnam on May 9.

The big bombers also kept on pounding enemy concentrations outside Saigon as part of the campaign against a major new attack expected on the capital. Police sources said they had fresh intelligence reports that the Communist command has ordered Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars to regroup at secret bases in the area, some as far as 75 miles away from the capital, to prepare for a full-scale attack this month.

Ten of the eight-jet bombers attacked some of the enemy's largest base camps in Tay Ninh, a longtime Viet Cong stronghold along the Cambodian border 47 miles northwest of Saigon. Military strategists consider Tay Ninh a potential springboard for the third offensive against Saigon.

Fifteen B52s pounded other camps in Hau Nghia and Binh Duong provinces, which form a border triangle with Tay Ninh northwest of the city.

Another 1[illegible] bombers hammered enemy troop concentrations in Long Khanh Province, reportedly the headquarters of the North Vietnamese 5th Division 57 miles from Saigon

Oran Man Shot in Chest

BENTON -- Jessie McClinton, 42, of Oran is reported in poor condition at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, suffering from a gunshot wound in the chest.

Sheriff John Dennis said his office was called at 3 p.m. Sunday to investigate the shooting.

Witnesses said McClinton and J. T. Woods, a resident of the Sands area south of Benton near Morley, were at Turner's Tavern in Hayward City.

Witnesses said McClinton went over to the Woods car and hit Woods on the head with a beer bottle.

Woods went home, got a pistol and went to the McClinton home to wait for McClinton, Sheriff Dennis said. When McClinton arrived home, he was shot.

Woods put McClinton in his car and drove back to the tavern, where law officers were called, Sheriff Dennis said.

Charges were not immediately filed.

Beer, Cash Taken in Burglary

GRANT CITY --A burglary at the Anchor Inn early Sunday netted thieves about $60 in cash and four cases of beer, Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said.

Frank Null, owner of the 3.2 beer tavern, told Dennis he closed the tavern at 1:15 a.m. Sunday and discovered the breakin at 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

All coin machines had been broken into and four cases of beer were missing.

Entrance was gained by prying the lock on the front door.

Court Fee Bills May Be Revived

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Three bills raising court fees in St. Louis got a new chance in the Missouri Legislature today.

The bills were killed last week by the Senate Committee on Municipal Corporations on a 4-5 vote. But at the request of Mayor A. J. Cervantes, Sen. Japser M. Brancato, D-Kansas City, the chairman, agreed to reconvene his committee today to reconsider the measures.

If passed, they would raise court fees by about $300,000 this year and $600,000 in subsequent years.

Opponents charged some of the increases were too great and would have the effect of denying justice to the little man, especially in small civil suits.

Cervantes said unless the bills are passed the city's financial straits will be so desperate some employes will have to be laid off.

Both houses had planned to adjourn the special session late today. But if the bills are revived, Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters, D-Liberty, said he would reconvene the Senate to consider them Tuesday.

The House adopted a "wait and see" attitude until after the Senate acts.

Final adjournment had been scheduled for 5 p.m. until the St. Louis bill got a second chance.

Matthews Outlaws Livestock, Fireworks

MATTHEWS -- Ordinances prohibiting keeping livestock within 400 feet of any residence, outlawing the sale or shooting of fireworks within the city limits and leaving junked motor vehicles on property or streets within the city limits have been passed by the city council.

Conviction on violation of the livestock ordinance carries a maximum penalty of $100 fine, six months in city jail or both.

The board of aldermen reserves the right to license an organization to hold fireworks exhibits within the city limits.

Maximum penalty on conviction of violating the fireworks ordinance is $100, 10 days in jail or both.

The junked motor vehicle ordinance requires the violator to remove the vehicle within seven days of being notified by the city marshal. When the owner's name is unavailable the city marshall is authorized to remove it to city property for storage and eventual disposal if the owner does not claim it within 15 days of removal.

Maximum penalty for violation is $100 fine, 30 days in city jail or both.

U.S. Plane Forced to Land on Soviet Island

WASHINGTON (AP) — An airliner carrying 214 U.S. servicemen to Vietnam is being held today on a Soviet island in the Pacific Ocean after being forced to land by MIG fighters.

The chartered DC-8 was on its way to Vietnam from McChord Air Base in Seattle, Wash., Sunday when, the U.S. government said, it strayed off course and was forced to land on Iturup Island, a part of the Kuril chain in the northern Pacific.

The State Department immediately contacted the Soviet embassy in Washington and urged the quick release of the plane, its passengers and the 17 crewmen.

A Japanese air force radar station said it began tracking the plane at 7:30 p.m. EDT Sunday and warned the pilot he was on a course that would cross the Soviet-held island.

The pilot replied, "We cannot alter our course," Japanese sources said, indicating the plane already was under MIG escort.

The sources said the plane was tracked another five minutes before it disappeared from radar screens at a position about 30 miles south of Iturup Island.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson said in Moscow he was told by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and First Deputy Foreign Minister Vsily V. Kuznetsov the incident is under investigation.

The Pentagon said the pilot of the chartered Seaboard-World Airlines jet, Joseph Tosolini, talked by radio with another American aircraft during the incident.

According to the Pentagon, the pilot of the Seaboard plane reported about 7:20 p.m. that MIG fighters had intercepted him and was forcing him to land at what appeared to be a MIG base on an island.

At 7:39 p.m., the Pentagon said, the Seaboard plane radioed that it had landed without injury to anyone on board and without damage to the plane.

The last transmission was at 7:42 p.m. when the pilot reported he had shut off his engines, the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department, in announcing that the plane had been forced to land, said the aircraft, chartered from Seaboard by the Military Airlift Command, had strayed off its course enroue to Yokota, Japan.

In New York, headquarters for Seaboard-World, a spokesman for the charter line said the crew had flown the route several times and "we don't see how it could have been off course, unless there were some extraordinary factors."

Seaboard identified the rest of the crew as Henry Treger, copilot; Earl Scott, flight engineer and Lawrence Guernon, navigator.

The plane also carried several in-flight checkers and stewardesses.

Plan for Area Okayed

MALDEN -- The executive committee of the Bootheel regional planning commission has approved a comprehensive development plan for the Bootheel area.

Pat Lea of Sikeston, chairman of the planning commission, advised members of the committee that it was necessary for the commission to adopt and approve a plan in order for community projects to be approved by the housing and urban development office in Fort Worth.

Hurshel Crass, Jefferson City, of the community affairs department stated that several projects were being held up in the Forst Worth office pending the approval of the plan by the commission.

He reported that projects from New Madrid, East Prairie, Bloomfield, Steele, Dexter, Morehouse and Marston are in the Fort Worth office.

One Killed in Car-Truck Crash

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo. (AP) - Leon Wilber, 27, of St. Louis was killed early today when his car collided with a tractor trailer on U. S. 61 in Ste. Genevieve County.

Five other persons are injured, two are in critical condition.

Treaty Signed Jointly

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Johnson announced today that the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to start talks "in the nearest future" on limiting offensive and defensive nuclear missiles systems.

Johnson chose the occasion of the signing of the historic nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty at the White House to make his announcement.

White House officials reported 51 nations were joining the pact, to ban the spread of atomic weapons.

Signing ceremonies were conducted also in London and Moscow.

Hours before President Johnson spoke, Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin announced in Moscow that the Soviet Union wants to hold international talks on disarmament, including a halt in the manufacture of nuclear weapons and reduction of nuclear weapon stockpiles.

Kosygin also proposed discussions on limitation and reduction of "means of delivery of strategic weapons."

The premier attacked the United States. He said the need to eliminate foreign military bases, one of the Russian proposals, "is convincingly proved by the continued aggressive war of the U.S.A. in Vietnam."

In London, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, presiding at the signing ceremony there, called the treaty: "The most important measure of arms control and disarmament on which agreement has yet been reached."

Wilson pledged that Britain would continue "with renewed confidence and renewed hope to work for further advances in disarmament." Johnson, in his remarks, referred to the long U.S. effort to start discussions on cutting back the costly nuclear arms race. Moscow had indicated last Thursday that the Soviets were finally ready for such talks.

"At this moment of achievement and hope," the President said, "I am gratified to be able to report and announce to the world a significant agreementan agreement I have actively sought and worked since January 1964.

Kosygin Calls for Talks to Ban Underground Tests

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin told signers today of a treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons that the Soviet Union is ready to hold international talks on banning underground tests, the last remaining area for the trial explosion of atomic arms.

Kosygin said the talks could extend to the ending of nuclear weapons manufacture and the reduction of nuclear stockpiles. He also proposed discussions on the "The limitation and subsequent reduction of means of delivery of strategic weapons."

As Kosygin spoke, the Seismological Institute at Uppsala, Sweden, registered a strong "underground explosion" in the Soviet Union north of the Caspian Sea. It rated it at 6.6 on the Richter scale.

Kosygin's brief speech came at the Nonproliferation Treaty signing ceremony here. Similar ceremonies were conducted in London and Washington.

The Russians also proposed discussions on "The limitation and subsequent reduction of means of delivery of strategic weapons."

The Soviet premier's proposal to talk about reducing the longrange rockets, bombers and submarines which can deliver nuclear bombs was given added urgency by a report from Communist sources in Moscow that Red China has developed its first intercontinental ballistic missile.

Kosygin said the Soviet government sent a memorandum to all other governments with nine proposals for disarmament and peaceful cooperation.

The proposals also included prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, a proposal the Russians have made many times before.

B52s Make Viet North Raids

SAIGON (AP) -- American B52 bombers raided North Vietnam today for the first time in nearly two months and also dropped thousands of tons of explosives on secret Viet Cong bases in the provinces around Saigon.

Twenty-five of the U.S. Air Force's biggest bombers streaked over the northern half of the demilitarized zone and the southernmost part of North Vietnam to bomb coastal artillery sites which have been shelling U.S. destroyers and cruisers operating off the coast.

The key strike inside North Vietnam was around Cape Lay, 11 miles above the allied base at Gio Linh.

The B52s last attacked inside North Vietnam on May 9.

The big bombers also kept on pounding enemy concentrations outside Saigon as part of the campaign against a major new attack expected on the capital. Police sources said they had fresh intelligence reports that the Communist command has ordered Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars to regroup at secret bases in the area, some as far as 75 miles away from the capital, to prepare for a full-scale attack this month.

Ten of the eight-jet bombers attacked some of the enemy's largest base camps in Tay Ninh, a longtime Viet Cong stronghold along the Cambodian border 47 miles northwest of Saigon. Military strategists consider Tay Ninh a potential springboard for the third offensive against Saigon.

Fifteen B52s pounded other camps in Hau Nghia and Binh Duong provinces, which form a border triangle with Tay Ninh northwest of the city.

Another 1[illegible] bombers hammered enemy troop concentrations in Long Khanh Province, reportedly the headquarters of the North Vietnamese 5th Division 57 miles from Saigon

The new intelligence reports said enemy forces attacking Saigon would consist of infantrymen, sappers and an artillery regiment equipped with rockets, recoilless rifles and mortars. These would be ordered to seize sensitive government installations.

Construction Under Way on $4 Million Shopping Center

Officers of the Kingsway Plaza, Inc., a $4 million shopping center under construction on South Kingshighway, south of the intersection of Murray Lane, announced today the schedule of construction and the names of three of five major firms on which leases have been signed.

George Staples Jr., president of Kingsway Plaza, and Don Evans, secretary-treasurer, both of Charleston, made the announcement in a news conference in the community room of the First National Bank of Sikeston.

The center is to be located on a 31.5 acre tract on the southwest corner of South Kingshighway and Murray Lane. It is to be an air conditioned, enclosed mall-type center containing approximately seven acres under roof, with parking space provided for 2,424 automobiles.

Major tenants of the center include: J.C. Penney & Co. with 78,713 square feet; J.J. Newberry with 40,500 square feet; Safeway Supermarket with 17,232 square feet; plus a drive-in facility for the First National Bank of Sikeston.

Dearmont Oliver & Sons of Charleston is the contractor for clearing and grading of the property. The initial clearing began June 24. It is expected to be readied for actual building construction by Aug. 1, Staples said.

Tri State Steel Builders, Inc. of Charleston is the prime building contractor. Leon DuVall, Charleston, executive vice president of Tri State, attended the conference today.

Construction on the Penney building will start first as soon as the ground is readied probably by Aug. 1, Staples said.

Then, construction will start on the Newberry store, then Safeway and then the center complex. The five major stores on which leases have been signed are expected to be ready for occupancy by Oct. 1, 1969, Staples said.

A national chain drug store presently is being negotiated with for the center and it possibly will be ready for occupancy by October, 1969, Staples said.

The outside completion date for entire center complex is slated for Oct. 1, 1970, Staples said.

The center, as planned now, will contain a total of 36 individual stores. Negotiations are proceeding with a theater to be built near the Penney Co. in the complex. If the theater is built, it would eliminate space for six of the smaller store places in the plans now, Staples said.

The other stores include drug stores, shoe stores and speciality shops.

In addition to the five major stores, leases have been signed on two smaller stores, Staples said.

Staples said a news release could be expected within the next 10 days on the two other major stores in the complex. They will be a variety store and a department store, he said.

This center has been two years in the planning and developing and as a result, Sikeston will have the most modern shopping complex available, Evans said.

The most important changes in plans disclosed today and those announced a year ago was the need to modify leases on the major stores in respect to commencement dates and completion dates, Staples said.

For esthetic purposes, the mall is being designed to contain fountains and shrubbery. It will be possible to shop in all 36 stores without leaving the comfort of the air conditioned mall, Evans said.

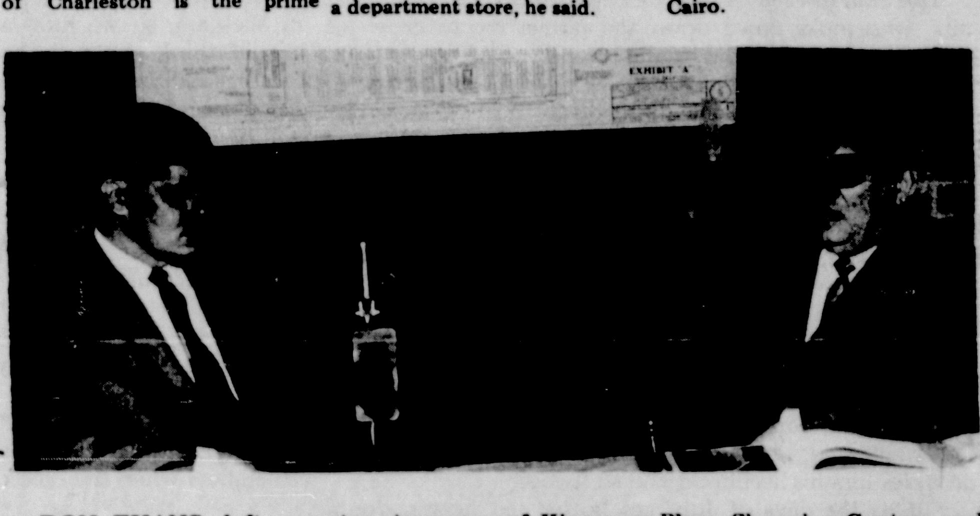
"With major industry moving into the area and hundreds of new jobs being created, a center of this size will establish Sikeston as the retail trading center for all of southeast Missouri," Staples said.

Kingsway Plaza will not only serve as a regional trading center, but will give employment to approximately 350 persons, thus it will be another major industry for Sikeston, Staples noted.

The architects are Gordon and Wilson, A.I.A. of St. Louis. The leasing agent is Staples Real Estate and Loan Company of Charleston.

Staples was the leasing agent for the Town Plaza Shopping Center in Cape Girardeau, and shopping centers in Popar Bluff and Columbia.

Evans, formerly a bank examiner here, is vice president of Security National Bank of Cairo.



DON EVANS, left, secretary-treasurer of Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center, and George Staples Jr., right, president, both of Charleston, announced today the construction schedule of five major stores on which leases have been signed. The five major stores are expected to open in October of 1969.

Penney, Newberry Tell of Plans for New Stores

Company officials for the J.C. Penney Co. and the J.J. Newberry Co. announced today details of plans for the stores to open in the Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center.

Officials of both companies said the openings are based on a confidence in Sikeston's potential as a major shopping area in Southeast Missouri.

Penney has decided to move ahead with a plan to build a 67,140-square-foot department store in the shopping center, according to Stan Bush, store manager.

The store will be a single level structure of 64,080 square feet and have an equipment penthouse of 3,060 square feet. Penney's present store on New Madrid and Front streets will close with the opening of the new shopping center facility.

Penney's Kingsway Plaza store will offer a wide selection of the chain's private-brand hard lines, and a full assortment of fashion apparel. The spaciousness of the new building will make it possible for a wider range and greater selection of merchandise than was previously available in the downtown store.

In keeping with its policy of offering customers one-stop shopping service, the store will have an 8,478 square foot auto center providing full car servicing and complete assortment of the company's new, foremost private-brand tires, batteries and auto accessories. The ten-car bay, free standing facility will offer Sikeston motirists full front-to-rear overhaul and repair work. A main feature of the auto center will be Penney's Foremost brand gasoline.

The building will measure 180 by 356 feet and will be air-conditioned throughout.

Announcing plans for construction of the new Penney store, V.O. Lindstrom, regional Penney manager from St. Louis, said:

"We are pleased about this new store because it will enable Penney's to do a better job of bringing quality merchandise, low prices and friendly service to Sikeston and surrounding communities. This new store is evidence of our faith in the future of Sikeston and of Missouri generally.

"The new Penney store will offer a full assortment of soft lines and ready-to-wear for which the Penney Company has long been famous."

In addition, Penney's Kingsway Plaza store will carry a large selection of Penncrest appliances, decorative home furnishings, housewares, sporting goods, toys and outdoor equipment.

"Layout of merchandise in the new store will be arranged to present complete lines by style, size, price and color for easy shopping," Lindstrom added.

The store will have flourescent lighting with items of special interest spotlighted to emphasize color and details. Warm pinks and beiges will decorate women's fashion departments, lively colors will please the younger set. Men's and boys' departments will be set off by stronger colors associated with active living.

Directional signs and department markers will be used to pinpoint the location of merchandise. Straight, wide aisles will permit customers to shop the entire store in a single visit. High ceilings will add to the effect of spaciousness.

The Newberry department store will offer more than 50 merchandise catagories. They include family wearing apparel, fashion accessories, shoes, infant's wear, domestics, housewares, fabrics, hardware, paints, toys, toiletries, sporting goods, luggage and appliances grouped and displayed as complete shops within the larger framework of the store.

The concept of shops within a shop makes selection easier and saves customers' shopping time, John J. Newberry Jr., vice president, said.

Cashier stations and store layout will be engineered to give the greatest possible customer convenience.

In addition, a modern and efficiently equipped coffee shop will serve moderately priced meals and snacks.

Because constant high quality of all merchandise is of primary importance, a quality control department and testing laboratory is maintained in the company's New York City distribution center.

"In our efforts to insure merchandise performance, our laboratory testing methods are designed to simulate consumer use as nearly as is possible," said D. D. Milius, New York, senior vice president in charge of all merchandise in the chain.

THE COYOTES' NIGHT TO HOWL

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Count one for the coyotes in the hills near here. The Pasadena board of directors has turned down a proposed ordinance that would have permitted the trapping of coyotes in the Anandale-Linda Vista-San Rafael hills. Some residents had complained that coyotes were killing dogs and cats. But friends of the coyotes wrote 100 letters, saying that the beasts help keep down rodents, that steel traps are cruel and dangerous and that the coyote population is a colorful heritage of the west.

WE TRULY BELIEVE

The Fourth of July isn't what it used to be and that's one happy change we'll go along with. We're referring to the fireworks that used to fill the air and deafen the ears - to say nothing of endangering life and limb. In days gone past, powerful fireworks were placed in the hands of precocious little imps, sometimes referred toto as little boys, of which we used to be one. Looking back to those times, we're amazed that we lived to grow up.

And now that we're rid of fireworks to a large extent, we have Holiday traffic on the highways, and there are always those who just must pass everybody else, so the best way to spend a safe and sane Fourth is to stay home. You'll have just as much fun and you'll be all in one piece the next day.

Our country has grown and changed since July 4, 1776 when the American patriots adopted and signed the Declaration of Independence in Independence Hall in Philadelphia. We wonder what they would think of our country could they be here today. Would they approve of the course into which we, as stewards, have allowed our country to drift? Those men were willing if necessary to give their lives for Freedom, but over the years since that eventful day on July 4, 1776, patriotism, as those men knew it, has gradually waned and down through the years, slowly but surely, we have and are today allowing those precious Freedoms to be taken from us, one by one, in return for doles from an ever increasing paternalistic government.

How much farther down that road are we going to travel? Have we all ready gone so far that there is no turningback? Shall we, in our complacency, forfeit more and more of our Freedoms, or will we call a halt?

America is still the land of opportunity and, speaking of opportunity, it never presents itself through our sole efforts, but always, directly or indirectly, we are helped by others who assist us along the way and they, too, fill their place in the scheme of things.

The skill of each of us is of importance to all of us. Let him who looks down upon the farmer try to grow his own food - or him who snubs the carpenter try to build his own shelter. Let him who derides the tailor try to make his own clothes - or him who belittles the laundress try to iron his own shirts. The proud and pompous need but to remind themselves that Jesus was a carpenter, Mohammed was a shepherd and Moses was a keeper of flocks. Then he would require respect of all God's children and admiration and appreciation for the special contribution each makes to our way of life.

And so life is an endless cycle that goes on and on and everything we do affects others and contributes to or lessens their welfare. And as the days get warmer and some of us sit in comfort with our air conditioners or electric fans, some one else is working to supply the electricity and, likewise, our purchasing these appliances provides him his livelihood and so it goes.

But as the days of July get hotter and hotter, don't spend all your time trying to keep cool. If you do, you'll get behind with the rent and you'll otherwise be unhappy. The easiest way to keep cool is to keep busy. A breeze created through one's own efforts is the most satisfying breeze of all and it brings in the money along with it.

DON'T FORGET SPENDING CUTS!

What voters will watch for now is that the Administration-promised $6 billion cut in federal spending is really made.

Months ago the 10 per cent income tax surcharge was considered as unlikely as a July blizzard. A tax increase in an election year is generally unthinkable.

But Congress sensed the prevailing mood that inflation, interest hikes, the gold crisis and increasing costs of the Vietnam war are a real threat to the nation's continued prosperity.

Even election year campaign oratory could not disguise the threat of a looming budget deficit of $24 billion.

Mr. Johnson says he will sign the bill even though he strongly opposed the $6 billion spending cut in what he told Congress were essential programs already reduced to rock-bottom levels.

Tax increases have a habit of sticking like leeches. No one expects this new surcharge to be dropped with next year's June 30 deadline. But taxpayers forced with cutting their own personal spending will keep a watchful eye to see the succeeding Administration does the same.

STAR—SPANGLED PERENNIALS

Just as sure as most American firecrackers are made in Japan, the following will take place on or about July Fourth:

One elder statesman (meaning a politician who never got caught) in every city, town and hamlet in an interview that no one is interested in listening to patriotic speeches by elder statesmen on Independence Day anymore.

Four hundred and seventy-two editorials will warn against the dangers of fireworks. Sixteen thousand merrymakers will nevertheless be injured by fireworks 19 more than last year, when the same warnings were issued.

Twelve hundred and four newspapers will run picture of crowded beaches.

Seven aged sportswriters will recall for the 51st consecutive year that the Boston Braves won the 1914 National League pennant and World Series even though they were in last place on July 4th.

One hundred and four headlines will say, "Clear Skies For Holiday."

Thirty-six comic strips will be based on the irony of sedentary characters knocking themselves out during the long weekend by swilling endless quarts of beer mowing the lawn, playing golf, swimming, surfing, rowing, traveling on crowded highways, holding cookouts and climbing the Himalayas.

Every newspaper in every community will print a schedule of holiday events Nevertheless, the city room phone will ring endlessly, with constant readers asking, "When's the band concert?" 'Where's the fireworks?" "What time's the bonfire?" 'Where's the beauty pageant?.. What time does the ball game start?" "Where's the races?" 'Who's on first?"

Eighty-two editorial page cartoons will show a kindly Uncle Sam lighting a giant firecracker under three oddballs named Chou, Mao and Ho.

No parade crowd will be estimated at less than 100,000.

Twenty-two thousand newspapermen who have to work on the holiday weekend will quietly count their blessings.

NO ONE ESCAPES

While most of us have been simple bystanders as we read and saw civil disorders in our nation that have virtually wrecked large areas of many American cities we tended to thank providence that we had escaped the unpleasantness.

But have we escaped? We most decidedly have not.

Reporters have described the riot-torn streets demolished buildings and hoodlums making off with stolen merchandise as the "other war." Destruction of public and private property will be reflected in insurance rates, in the cost of government and hundreds of other direct and indirect ways that are inescapable no matter where we live.

Just as we all have a stake in the tragic cost of the war in Vietnam, so we have a stake inthe "other war." We should think about it the next time we see or read of looting and burning. It may not be our own property going up in smoke or being carried off by vandals but we will be paying part of the cost of both the lost property and the forces of law and order that must be called upon to bring the destruction to an end.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

The same streak in her nature that impels a girl to become an old maid also often leads her to prefer a pet cat for company rather than a dog. Cats keep their place; dogs, like men, are more troublesome around the house, boisterous, and clamorous of affection.

Anyone looking around for good future presidential possibilities might do well to keep in mind some of the bright young quarterbacks throwing footballs in the professional leagues. After all, they've got at least three big qualifications— talent, leadership, brains—an.

We rarely take the trouble to know thoroughly the things we love or admire. For example, everybody likes to see butterflies, but of the hundreds of varieties around most of us can name only two—cabbage and Monarch.

The reason grownups get tired of a telephone conversation so quickly is that they are usually telling each other lies, and after 40 it takes too much energy to lie more than a few minutes at a time.

It is no longer necessary to build a better mousetrap to get the world to beat a path to your door. As many a suburbanite has found out, all that is necessary is to build a swimming pool in your backyard. The world will then show up at the front door in a swimsuit—and expect you to furnish the towels.

How do you explain the financial success of some butchers? By a simple rule of thumb.

Careless Americans celebrating the Fourth of July with a big bang are also expected to touch off a litter explosion if they run true to past performance. Keep America Beautiful, Inc., which conducts a year-round campaign for the the nation's independence from the blight of litter, estimates millions of citizens taking to the roads, parks and beaches for the holiday will scatter some 13.5 billion cubic feet of refuse about the countryside—enough to fill a giant firecracker taller than the Empire State Building. Missouri Governors aren't to blame for the crisis of urban sprawl centers in the state. They really have no special obligation to the cities, particularly when aid to the cities would jeopardize existent state programs that are of concern to all of Missouri.

If Governor Hearnes thinks he's under political pressure to help the cities, just let him-and we don't expect him to-start neglecting his resonsibilities for state programs.

H.L. Hunt Says

U THANT
ATTACKS THE UNITED STATES

The United Nations Secretary-General, supposedly non-partisan and objective, has joined the communists in using the U.N. as a forum for anti-U.S. attacks.

The U.N. charter reads that the secretary-general and his staff "must. . .refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsive only to the United Nations." Yet U Thant has used his office to deliver speeches strongly attacking the U.S. and supporting the official communist line.

Several times U Thant has condemned our government for refusing to recognize Red China, but has never condemned the aggressive policies of Peking nor pointed out that the Chinese communists have no legal right to hold power.

He also condemned our efforts to defend South Vietnam, on one occasion describing our bombing of North Vietnam as "of questionable morality and doubtful legality." There was no mention of the obviously illegal and immoral attempts of the Viet Cong to enslave South Vietnam and of the terrorism and atrocities of which they are guilty.

The Secretary-General called upon the U.S. to halt all bombing, but suggested no concessions by the North Vietnamese. This plays directly into the hands of the aggressors.

He extended his attacks to U.S. internal affairs by stating that "the prevailing mood of violence in the United States" is "a consequence of the psychological climate created by the Vietnamese war." Again, this is the communist line. U Thant is using his office for obvious partisan purposes and is seriously injuring the cause of genuine peace by his biased and intemperate remarks. HLH

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Anti-violence campaign finds favor with TV audience and industry; Networks reappraise and revise programs; Parents should boycott sponsors of children's horror shows

WASHINGTON—In response to our columns on TV violence, thousands of advertisers, broadcasters and viewers have written or phoned us that they wish to join in the campaign to eliminate bloodshed from the home screen. Here are the heartening developments:

1. An outpouring of mail has come from aroused parents who have resolved to turn off TV programs that feature violence, and to boycott the products of companies that sponsor TV violence. Some parents have told us that they also intend to stop buying toy guns and other weapons for their children.

2. A group of advertising men, calling themselves Advertising Men for the De-escalation of Violence on TV, has formed on Madison Avenue. Its members agree to urge to stop sponsoring violence on TV.

3. Levi Strauss and Co., makers of slacks, shirts and jackets, has dropped its sponsorship of violent programs. After we identified the company as sponsor of one of the worst shows on television, C. M. Robinson, Jr., the advertising manager, wrote us: "We were tempted to strongly disavow any responsibility for programming which is really controlled by the networks . . . as I said, this was our first reaction. We are now convinced that you are right and that it is OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO CONSIDER PROGRAM CONTENT."

4. Network officials, producers and writers have been reappraising their programs. CBS has taken the lead in editing excessive violence out of future scripts. The other two networks also have rewritten and refilmed some violent episodes.

5. Sen. Tom Dodd, D—Conn., has revived his investigation into TV violence. Six years ago, he suppressed evidence that would have embarrassed his friends on the TV networks, particularly NBC. We happen to have copies of the documents he suppressed, which we promise to publish if he tries again to throttle the investigation.

6. Several newspapers have joined in the outcry against TV brutality and bloodshed. Editorials from coast to coast have called for a cleanup of the TV screen.

—POWER OF THE PUBLIC—

The most effective way for the public to get better television, however, is to stop patronizing the sponsors of TV violence. At our request, the National Association for Better Broadcasting has listed the 10 TV shows their experts consider "most detrimental" for children. Their judgment is based upon 17 years of responsible TV monitoring.

Their list of the 10 worst shows on TV includes (1) The Avengers, ABC; (2) Felony Squad, ABC. (3) Guns of Will Sonnett, ABC; (4) Cimarron Strip, CBS; (5) Man from U.N.C.L.E., Syndicated; (6) Batman, ABC; (7) Wild, Wild West, CBS; (8) The Saint, NBC; (9) Rat Patrol, ABC; and (10) Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, ABC.

"All 10 of the programs are excessively violent and graphically illustrate terror, horror, brutality and sadism," Frank Orme, the NABB's executive vice president, reported to us. "All 10 are televised during time periods when the sets are readily accessible to almost all children."

Orme also condemned what he called "The Saturday Morning Ghetto of Animated Horror." The worst of these cartoon shows, he said, are Super President, Superman, Birdman, Herculoid, Super Six, Might Mightor, Space Ghost and Samson and Goliath.

Parents can check for themselves which companies sponsor these kill-for-thrill programs. However, we have gone through the sponsor lists and picked out the companies which have spent the most money on TV violence.

We found more Polaroid camera commercials than any others on the programs condemned by the Better Broadcasting group. Polaroid spent $9,377,000 for TV advertising last year, but it was impossible to break down exactly how much went to pay for TV violence.

Next on the list was Beecham products, manufacturers of MacCleans toothpaste, Brylcream and Kellog's tasteless castor oil. Beecham spent $8,669,700 on TV commercials last year. Our survey showed that the American Tobacco Company, which lavished $45,869,700 on TV advertising in 1967, also spent a large portion on violence shows. American Tobacco produces Lucky Strike, Pall Mall, Tareyton, Carlton and Montclair cigarets.

Other companies which seemed to favor violent programs were Warner-Lambert, producer of DuBarry cosmetics and Listerine, which shelled out $42,515,900 for TV commercials last year; Mars, Inc., makers of Three Musketeers, Mars Bars, Milky Way, Snickers, M and M, Forever Yours and Starbust candies, which spent $11,658,500; and Shell Oil, which had a $19,439,500 TV budget.

Even the Bell Telephone Company, which has won acclaim for its high-quality Bell Telephone Hour, has also sponsored more than its share of TV violence.

It is up to the public now to demonstrate that TV violence doesn't pay.

—POETIC BRITON—

There was so much rejoicing at the United Nations over the success of the joint Soviet-American effort to push through a nuclear non-proliferation pact that the British delegate, Lord Caradon, sat down and wrote a poem.

He was most lavish in praising V. V. Kuznetsov, the Soviet deputy foreign minister, who flew to the UN from Moscow to help rescue the treaty. Wrote Lord Caradon:

"He comes like a dove from the Communist ark,
And light appears where all was dark.
His coming quickly turns the tide;
The propaganda flood subside.
And now that he has changed the weather,
Lion and lam can vote together.
God bless the Russian delegation—
I waive consecutive translation."

Charges 'White Only' Signs Are Still Up, Harassing Negroes in Labor and Industry

There are scores in all fields who cuss out Clifford L. Alexander Jr. regularly. They say he just doesn't understand, and that solving the "Negro problem" simply by saying go out and hire more black workers is far too simplified a solution.

Mr. Alexander, a former White House aide, is chairman of the commission empowered to provide equal employment opportunities across the land. His critics say that workers of any race, color or creed must at least be qualified, must make themselves available and must be willing to work in the available jobs.

Mr. Alexander says it's industry's problem and labor's too. I asked him to "lay it on the line." Why does he believe as he does? Here is his reply:

By Clifford L.
Alexander Jr.
Chairman of the Equal
Employment Opportunity
Commission

Washington: There has been much talk recently and some action on the continuing employment crisis facing America's minority work force.

A few major corporations have launched experimental training programs for the "hardcore unemployed"; the number of companies actively recruiting top Negro graudates has multiplied several fold; community opinion against the blatant discriminator has hardened.

These are encouraging symbols of progress -- but they are no more than symbols. The average Negro job seeker still faces entry barriers and promotional problems unknown to the white applicant; employment opportunities for the Puerto Rican or Mexican-American are tightly circumscribed simply by virtue of his accent or family origin.

And American industry squanders over $30 billion annually in unrealized Gross National Product through the systematic rejection of minority potential.

Four years ago, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act banned job discrimination; since then, a growing body of executive orders and judicial rulings have reinforced this legislation.

To a significant number of American businessmen, however, discriminatory employment practices remain standard operating procedure, rationalized by the claim of social necessity or company tradition.

The "White Only" sign has been removed from the window, but it has been replaced by other forms of exclusion. The minority applicant is free to apply -- but may have to secure a recommendation from a member of the currently all-white work force unknown to him.

He may be subjected to qualifying exams heavily weighted toward white, middle-class experience; his hiring may be contingent on membership in a union that has steadily resisted integration.

Whether his application is discreetly filed away or rejected outright, the effect on the minority applicant is identical -- and conclusive.

Racism has been packaged and presented in a slogans worthy of industry's best marketing efforts -- but the products remain unchanged. The bigot in grey flannel is as wrongheaded, and as destructive, as his redneck precursor. And the effect is the same -- exclusion or failure to promote the minority worker.

Discriminatory action is frequently wrapped in the cloak of social necessity. We've all heard the excuse, "I'd love to hire a Negro -- or a Puerto Rican -- but the rest of the workers might object."

No businessman would let company consensus stand as his excuse for income tax evasion; no drug manufacturer would argue to the FDA, "My workers aren't used to running the new safety checks, so I didn't want to push them on it."

Employer obligations under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act are just as stringent and just as clear-cut. If a man applies for a job, is qualified for that job, and is rejected because of his skin tone, or accent, or background, the law has been broken and the employer is culpable.

There is an undeniable possibility that minority employes may not be warmly welcomed into the company bowling league or be the hit of the office Christmas party.

But unless a man was hired as social director, his business ability should stand independent of his supposed social acceptability. Neither skin color nor place or origin determine a worker's productivity -- and neither should be factors in the employment decision.

The EEOC, and the federal law, do not seek extraordinary consideration for the minority candidate, but they do demand the elimination of extraordinary barriers.

The average white applicant is not required to guarantee his social prowess; he is simply expected to demonstrate his capability and effectiveness on the job. Companies should demand no less from their minority applicants; they should be restrained by conscience, as they are by law, from demanding more.

The visibly heightened interest industry now shows in the bright young Negro college graduate has created the illusion that minority job opportunity is wide open. Regardless of overall personnel policies, employers are seeking out the exceptionally qualified minority candidate -- the one with the Harvard B.A. or the man who is first in his class at Howard.

We must keep in mind, however, that the white Phi Beta Kappa is also being hotly pursued. In fact, all that has expanded is industry's awareness that the black superman is as much as asset to a firm as the white superman and that both are scarce commodities. But for every superman a firm hires, it also takes on hundreds of average people to fill average jobs.

Until every employer recognizes that the mediocre black man can perform routine tasks as well as the mediocre white man, until he acknowledges that fact by recruiting, hiring, and promoting minority workers of average skill to meet his average needs, millions of minority candidates will remain excluded from industry or trapped in dead-end jobs.

An employer's willingness to "make an exception" for the exceptional minority candidate, his recruiting bulletins proclaiming equal job opportunity on every level, cannot change the distorted pattern of minority employment which characterizes so much of American industry.

For by now the minority candidate, steadily confronted with industry's slogans of exclusion, has finally gotten the message.

He will only apply to those few companies and for those few positions where his acceptance seems a feasible possibility. To counteract potential racist rejections, he "rejects" industry to go into teaching, government, medicine or other professional occupations.

The EEOC hearings in New York City earlier this year produced testimony from major white collar employers that they were willing and eager to hire minority candidates but never seem to see any. We suggested to them that they better go out looking, just as they do for majority candidates.

The company truly committed to equal employment opportunity must realize by now that a positive effort is needed. Only active recruitment will stimulate the minority application; only visible proof that minority opportunity exists will shake his well-founded belief to the contrary.

No Negro professional is likely to apply to a firm which is unable to produce a Negro secretary. Few Spanish-surnamed Americans will be encouraged to pursue careers in a firm where they meet only "Anglo" faces -- from the personnel office to the newspaper advertisement.

Industry's passive insistence that opportunity is there for the taking is a simple evasion -- or deliberate misrepresentation. At this point of crisis in the minority community and in our entire society, we can afford neither.

Business self-righteousness must be translated into honest and active concern. American industry, famous for its energy and creativity, surely has the competence to tackle this pressing problem. It needs the will!

STAR—SPANGLED PERENNIALS

Just as sure as most American firecrackers are made in Japan, the following will take place on or about July Fourth:

One elder statesman (meaning a politician who never got caught) in every city, town and hamlet in an interview that no one is interested in listening to patriotic speeches by elder statesmen on Independence Day anymore.

Four hundred and seventy-two editorials will warn against the dangers of fireworks. Sixteen thousand merrymakers will nevertheless be injured by fireworks 19 more than last year, when the same warnings were issued.

Twelve hundred and four newspapers will run picture of crowded beaches.

Seven aged sportswriters will recall for the 51st consecutive year that the Boston Braves won the 1914 National League pennant and World Series even though they were in last place on July 4th.

One hundred and four headlines will say, "Clear Skies For Holiday."

Thirty-six comic strips will be based on the irony of sedentary characters knocking themselves out during the long weekend by swilling endless quarts of beer mowing the lawn, playing golf, swimming, surfing, rowing, traveling on crowded highways, holding cookouts and climbing the Himalayas.

Every newspaper in every community will print a schedule of holiday events Nevertheless, the city room phone will ring endlessly, with constant readers asking, "When's the band concert?" ' Where's the fireworks?" "What time's the bonfire?" ' Where's the beauty pageant?.. What time does the ball game start?" "Where's the races?" ' Who's on first?"

Eighty-two editorial page cartoons will show a kindly Uncle Sam lighting a giant firecracker under three oddballs named Chou, Mao and Ho.

No parade crowd will be estimated at less than 100,000.

Twenty-two thousand newspapermen who have to work on the holiday weekend will quietly count their blessings.

NO ONE ESCAPES

While most of us have been simple bystanders as we read and saw civil disorders in our nation that have virtually wrecked large areas of many American cities we tended to thank providence that we had escaped the unpleasantness.

But have we escaped? We most decidedly have not.

Reporters have described the riot-torn streets demolished buildings and hoodlums making off with stolen merchandise as the "other war." Destruction of public and private property will be reflected in insurance rates, in the cost of government and hundreds of other direct and indirect ways that are inescapable no matter where we live.

Just as we all have a stake in the tragic cost of the war in Vietnam, so we have a stake inthe "other war." We should think about it the next time we see or read of looting and burning. It may not be our own property going up in smoke or being carried off by vandals but we will be paying part of the cost of both the lost property and the forces of law and order that must be called upon to bring the destruction to an end.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

The same streak in her nature that impels a girl to become an old maid also often leads her to prefer a pet cat for company rather than a dog. Cats keep their place; dogs, like men, are more troublesome around the house, boisterous, and clamorous of affection.

In a zoo the tiger is the animal most contemptuous of peering humanity. But the gorilla has the saddest look of any captive creature. Something in his hurt eyes says, "You and I both know that I shouldn't be here."

One gets used to the foibles of other people, but I always feel like spanking the pretty young blonde at a cocktail party who thinks exhaling twin jets of cigarette smoke through her nose makes her look more sophisticated.

Remember when national political campaigns used to win the kind of attention that only pro football now gets? The game may soon become a springboard to elective public office. Anyone looking around for good future presidential possibilities might do well to keep in mind some of the bright young quarterbacks throwing footballs in the professional leagues. After all, they've got at least three big qualifications— talent, leadership, brains—an.

We rarely take the trouble to know thoroughly the things we love or admire. For example, everybody likes to see butterflies, but of the hundreds of varieties around most of us can name only two—cabbage and Monarch.

The guys we find easiest to forget are those who hand us their business cards so we'll be sure to remember who they are.

The reason teen-agers can talk so endlessly on the telephone is that they are telling each other the truth—they haven't found out yet how disastrous the truth can be. The reason grownups get tired of a telephone conversation so quickly is that they are usually telling each other lies, and after 40 it takes too much energy to lie more than a few minutes at a time.

It is no longer necessary to build a better mousetrap to get the world to beat a path to your door. As many a suburbanite has found out, all that is necessary is to build a swimming pool in your backyard. The world will then show up at the front door in a swimsuit—and expect you to furnish the towels.

How do you explain the financial success of some butchers? By a simple rule of thumb.

One of the troubles with marriage today is that too many women get their money from their husband—and their opinions from a male hairdresser.

Careless Americans celebrating the Fourth of July with a big bang are also expected to touch off a litter explosion if they run true to past performance. Keep America Beautiful, Inc., which conducts a year-round campaign for the the nation's independence from the blight of litter, estimates millions of citizens taking to the roads, parks and beaches for the holiday will scatter some 13.5 billion cubic feet of refuse about the countryside—enough to fill a giant firecracker taller than the Empire State Building. Missouri Governors aren't to blame for the crisis of urban sprawl centers in the state. They really have no special obligation to the cities, particularly when aid to the cities would jeopardize existent state programs that are of concern to all of Missouri.

If Governor Hearnes thinks he's under political pressure to help the cities, just let him-and we don't expect him to-start neglecting his resonsibilities for state programs.

H.L. Hunt Says

U THANT
ATTACKS THE UNITED STATES

The United Nations Secretary-General, supposedly non-partisan and objective, has joined the communists in using the U.N. as a forum for anti-U.S. attacks.

The U.N. charter reads that the secretary-general and his staff "must. . .refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsive only to the United Nations." Yet U Thant has used his office to deliver speeches strongly attacking the U.S. and supporting the official communist line.

Several times U Thant has condemned our government for refusing to recognize Red China, but has never condemned the aggressive policies of Peking nor pointed out that the Chinese communists have no legal right to hold power.

He also condemned our efforts to defend South Vietnam, on one occasion describing our bombing of North Vietnam as "of questionable morality and doubtful legality." There was no mention of the obviously illegal and immoral attempts of the Viet Cong to enslave South Vietnam and of the terrorism and atrocities of which they are guilty.

The Secretary-General called upon the U.S. to halt all bombing, but suggested no concessions by the North Vietnamese. This plays directly into the hands of the aggressors.

He extended his attacks to U.S. internal affairs by stating that "the prevailing mood of violence in the United States" is "a consequence of the psychological climate created by the Vietnamese war." Again, this is the communist line. U Thant is using his office for obvious partisan purposes and is seriously injuring the cause of genuine peace by his biased and intemperate remarks. HLH

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Anti-violence campaign finds favor with TV audience and industry; Networks reappraise and revise programs; Parents should boycott sponsors of children's horror shows

WASHINGTON—In response to our columns on TV violence, thousands of advertisers, broadcasters and viewers have written or phoned us that they wish to join in the campaign to eliminate bloodshed from the home screen. Here are the heartening developments:

1. An outpouring of mail has come from aroused parents who have resolved to turn off TV programs that feature violence, and to boycott the products of companies that sponsor TV violence. Some parents have told us that they also intend to stop buying toy guns and other weapons for their children.

2. A group of advertising men, calling themselves Advertising Men for the De-escalation of Violence on TV, has formed on Madison Avenue. Its members agree to urge to stop sponsoring violence on TV.

3. Levi Strauss and Co., makers of slacks, shirts and jackets, has dropped its sponsorship of violent programs. After we identified the company as sponsor of one of the worst shows on television, C. M. Robinson, Jr., the advertising manager, wrote us: "We were tempted to strongly disavow any responsibility for programming which is really controlled by the networks . . . as I said, this was our first reaction. We are now convinced that you are right and that it is OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO CONSIDER PROGRAM CONTENT."

4. Network officials, producers and writers have been reappraising their programs. CBS has taken the lead in editing excessive violence out of future scripts. The other two networks also have rewritten and refilmed some violent episodes.

5. Sen. Tom Dodd, D—Conn., has revived his investigation into TV violence. Six years ago, he suppressed evidence that would have embarrassed his friends on the TV networks, particularly NBC. We happen to have copies of the documents he suppressed, which we promise to publish if he tries again to throttle the investigation.

6. Several newspapers have joined inthe outcry against TV brutality and bloodshed. Editorials from coast to coast have called for a cleanup of the TV screen.

—POWER OF THE PUBLIC—

The most effective way for the public to get better television, however, is to stop patronizing the sponsors of TV violence. At our request, the National Association for Better Broadcasting has listed the 10 TV shows their experts consider "most detrimental" for children. Their judgment is based upon 17 years of responsible TV monitoring.

Their list of the 10 worst shows on TV includes (1) The Avengers, ABC; (2) Felony Squad, ABC. (3) Guns of Will Sonnett, ABC; (4) Cimarron Strip, CBS; (5) Man from U.N.C.L.E., Syndicated; (6) Batman, ABC; (7) Wild, Wild West, CBS; (8) The Saint, NBC; (9) Rat Patrol, ABC; and (10) Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, ABC.

"All 10 of the programs are excessively violent and graphically illustrate terror, horror, brutality and sadism," Frank Orme, the NABB's executive vice president, reported to us. "All 10 are televised during time periods when the sets are readily accessible to almost all children."

Orme also condemned what he called "The Saturday Morning Ghetto of Animated Horror." The worst of these cartoon shows, he said, are Super President, Superman, Birdman, Herculoid, Super Six, Might Mightor, Space Ghost and Samson and Goliath.

Parents can check for themselves which companies sponsor these kill-for-thrill programs. However, we have gone through the sponsor lists and picked out the companies which have spent the most money on TV violence.

We found more Polaroid camera commercials than any others on the programs condemned by the Better Broadcasting group. Polaroid spent $9,377,000 for TV advertising last year, but it was impossible to break down exactly how much went to pay for TV violence.

Next on the list was Beecham products, manufacturers of MacCleans toothpaste, Brylcream and Kellog's tasteless castor oil. Beecham spent $8,669,700 on TV commercials last year. Our survey showed that the American Tobacco Company, which lavished $45,869,700 on TV advertising in 1967, also spent a large portion on violence shows. American Tobacco produces Lucky Strike, Pall Mall, Tareyton, Carlton and Montclair cigarets.

Other companies which seemed to favor violent programs were Warner-Lambert, producer of DuBarry cosmetics and Listerine, which shelled out $42,515,900 for TV commercials last year; Mars, Inc., makers of Three Musketeers, Mars Bars, Milky Way, Snickers, M and M, Forever Yours and Starbust candies, which spent $11,658,500; and Shell Oil, which had a $19,439,500 TV budget.

Even the Bell Telephone Company, which has won acclaim for its high-quality Bell Telephone Hour, has also sponsored more than its share of TV violence.

It is up to the public now to demonstrate that TV violence doesn't pay.

—POETIC BRITON—

There was so much rejoicing at the United Nations over the success of the joint Soviet-American effort to push through a nuclear non-proliferation pact that the British delegate, Lord Caradon, sat down and wrote a poem.

He was most lavish in praising V. V. Kuznetsov, the Soviet deputy foreign minister, who flew to the UN from Moscow to help rescue the treaty. Wrote Lord Caradon:

"He comes like a dove from the Communist ark,
And light appears where all was dark.
His coming quickly turns the tide;
The propaganda flood subside.
And now that he has changed the weather,
Lion and lam can vote together.
God bless the Russian delegation—
I waive consecutive translation."

Inside Labor

Charges 'White Only' Signs Are Still Up, Harassing Negroes in Labor and Industry

There are scores in all fields who cuss out Clifford L. Alexander Jr. regularly. They say he just doesn't understand, and that solving the "Negro problem" simply by saying go out and hire more black workers is far too simplified a solution.

Mr. Alexander, a former White House aide, is chairman of the commission empowered to provide equal employment opportunities across the land. His critics say that workers of any race, color or creed must at least be qualified, must make themselves available and must be willing to work in the available jobs.

Mr. Alexander says it's industry's problem and labor's too. I asked him to "lay it on the line." Why does he believe as he does? Here is his reply:

By Clifford L.
Alexander Jr.
Chairman of the Equal
Employment Opportunity
Commission

Washington: There has been much talk recently and some action on the continuing employment crisis facing America's minority work force.

A few major corporations have launched experimental training programs for the "hardcore unemployed"; the number of companies actively recruiting top Negro graudates has multiplied several fold; community opinion against the blatant discriminator has hardened.

These are encouraging symbols of progress -- but they are no more than symbols. The average Negro job seeker still faces entry barriers and promotional problems unknown to the white applicant; employment opportunities for the Puerto Rican or Mexican-American are tightly circumscribed simply by virtue of his accent or family origin.

And American industry squanders over $30 billion annually in unrealized Gross National Product through the systematic rejection of minority potential.

Four years ago, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act banned job discrimination; since then, a growing body of executive orders and judicial rulings have reinforced this legislation.

To a significant number of American businessmen, however, discriminatory employment practices remain standard operating procedure, rationalized by the claim of social necessity or company tradition.

The "White Only" sign has been removed from the window, but it has been replaced by other forms of exclusion. The minority applicant is free to apply -- but may have to secure a recommendation from a member of the currently all-white work force unknown to him.

He may be subjected to qualifying exams heavily weighted toward white, middle-class experience; his hiring may be contingent on membership in a union that has steadily resisted integration.

Whether his application is discreetly filed away or rejected outright, the effect on the minority applicant is identical -- and conclusive.

Racism has been packaged and presented in a slogans worthy of industry's best marketing efforts -- but the products remain unchanged. The bigot in grey flannel is as wrongheaded, and as destructive, as his redneck precursor. And the effect is the same -- exclusion or failure to promote the minority worker.

Discriminatory action is frequently wrapped in the cloak of social necessity. We've all heard the excuse, "I'd love to hire a Negro -- or a Puerto Rican -- but the rest of the workers might object."

No businessman would let company consensus stand as his excuse for income tax evasion; no drug manufacturer would argue to the FDA, "My workers aren't used to running the new safety checks, so I didn't want to push them on it."

Employer obligations under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act are just as stringent and just as clear-cut. If a man applies for a job, is qualified for that job, and is rejected because of his skin tone, or accent, or background, the law has been broken and the employer is culpable.

There is an undeniable possibility that minority employes may not be warmly welcomed into the company bowling league or be the hit of the office Christmas party.

But unless a man was hired as social director, his business ability should stand independent of his supposed social acceptability. Neither skin color nor place or origin determine a worker's productivity -- and neither should be factors in the employment decision.

The EEOC, and the federal law, do not seek extraordinary consideration for the minority candidate, but they do demand the elimination of extraordinary barriers.

The average white applicant is not required to guarantee his social prowess; he is simply expected to demonstrate his capability and effectiveness on the job. Companies should demand no less from their minority applicants; they should be restrained by conscience, as they are by law, from demanding more.

The visibly heightened interest industry now shows in the bright young Negro college graduate has created the illusion that minority job opportunity is wide open. Regardless of overall personnel policies, employers are seeking out the exceptionally qualified minority candidate -- the one with the Harvard B.A. or the man who is first in his class at Howard.

We must keep in mind, however, that the white Phi Beta Kappa is also being hotly pursued. In fact, all that has expanded is industry's awareness that the black superman is as much as asset to a firm as the white superman and that both are scarce commodities. But for every superman a firm hires, it also takes on hundreds of average people to fill average jobs.

Until every employer recognizes that the mediocre black man can perform routine tasks as well as the mediocre white man, until he acknowledges that fact by recruiting, hiring, and promoting minority workers of average skill to meet his average needs, millions of minority candidates will remain excluded from industry or trapped in dead-end jobs.

An employer's willingness to "make an exception" for the exceptional minority candidate, his recruiting bulletins proclaiming equal job opportunity on every level, cannot change the distorted pattern of minority employment which characterizes so much of American industry.

For by now the minority candidate, steadily confronted with industry's slogans of exclusion, has finally gotten the message.

He will only apply to those few companies and for those few positions where his acceptance seems a feasible possibility. To counteract potential racist rejections, he "rejects" industry to go into teaching, government, medicine or other professional occupations.

The EEOC hearings in New York City earlier this year produced testimony from major white collar employers that they were willing and eager to hire minority candidates but never seem to see any. We suggested to them that they better go out looking, just as they do for majority candidates.

The company truly committed to equal employment opportunity must realize by now that a positive effort is needed. Only active recruitment will stimulate the minority application; only visible proof that minority opportunity exists will shake his well-founded belief to the contrary.

No Negro professional is likely to apply to a firm which is unable to produce a Negro secretary. Few Spanish-surnamed Americans will be encouraged to pursue careers in a firm where they meet only "Anglo" faces -- from the personnel office to the newspaper advertisement.

Industry's passive insistence that opportunity is there for the taking is a simple evasion -- or deliberate misrepresentation. At this point of crisis in the minority community and in our entire society, we can afford neither.

Business self-righteousness must be translated into honest and active concern. American industry, famous for its energy and creativity, surely has the competence to tackle this pressing problem. It needs the will!

Miss Alice Rainey Bride Of Dewayne Zimmerman

DEXTER -- Lighted tapers in a spiral candelabra and baskets of blue daisies formed the setting in the Missionary Baptist Church of Dexter Saturday night, June 8 for the wedding of Miss Alice Rainey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd G. Rainey of Dexter and Mr. Dewayne Zimmerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Zimmerman of Bernie. The Rev. Marshall Dark officiated at the impressive double ring ceremony at 7:30 in the evening.

A medley of traditional wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. Bob Coffey who also accompanied Joe Mayo of Bloomfield as he sang "Because."

Saturday's bride was given in marriage by her father and was attired in a white crepe A-line dress with empire waistline and train. The skirt, empire waistline and train were accented with bands of white Belgium lace embroidered with pearls. Her shoulder length veil was caught to a pearl encrusted princess crown and she carried a cascade arrangement of stephanotis centered with a white orchid.

Miss Kathy Webber of Dexter, maid of honor, was attired in a blue A-line floor length gown accented with white lace. A matching blue bow was her headdress. She carried blue daisies with white lace trim and ribbons with small blue love knots.

Leon Temples of Bernie was best man. Bruce Zimmerman and Gale Robinson of Bernie were ushers.

Mrs. Loyd Rainey, mother of the bride, chose for the wedding a mauve bonded lace dress with wood violet accessories. Mrs. Zimmerman chose for her son's wedding a pink knit two piece dress with white accessories. Their corsages were white carnations.

Wedding guests attended the reception immediately after the ceremony. The tables were covered with white lace cloth over blue. The three tiered cake centered the table and was garlanded with blue daisies and green leather leaf.

Miss Colleen Alleman of Dexter was at the guest book. Serving the guests were members of the "Silvertones," a dance group instructed by the bride. Members of the Silvertones are Debra Brown, Karen Fleeman, Rhonda Sifford, Tammy Lashley and Becky Temples.

Mr. Zimmerman and his bride will make their home on East St. Francis Street in Dexter after a short wedding trip to an undisclosed destination.

The former Miss Rainey will continue teaching dancing. She was graduated with the Dexter High School 1968 class.

Mr. Zimmerman is employed as a sample manager at Brown Shoe Company in Bernie.

Appreciable progress in solving the problems of realigning and expanding minor league baseball was reported following a six-hour meeting of an expansion committee Monday.

But the committee chairman, Bob Howsam, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, declined to discuss details of the project "mainly because we still are in the exploratory phases."

"We discussed the problems of realignment in accordance with major league expansion and are forwarding our findings to a special planning committee," Howsam added.

New farm outlets must be established at each level of the minors because of the additions of San Diego, Seattle, Kansas City and Montreal to the majors.

Howsam's committee right now is primarily concerned with the stockpiling of 24 Class AAA clubs. "After those are ascertained and established we'll concentrate on double-A working agreements, then the Class A levels," he said.

Since two Pacific Coast League cities, Seattle and San Diego, are committed to the majors in 1969 and a third city, Tacoma, is apt to lose its franchise because of the proximity of Seattle, realignment of the PCL is inevitable.

There is speculation that the PCL and the Class AAA International League may merge to form three eight-team divisions.

Jim Northrup seemed as pleased about breaking out of his hitting slump as he was with the two grand slam home runs he hit to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 14—3 rout of the Cleveland Indians Monday night.

"That's a heckuva way to come out of a slump isn't it?" inquired the tall, slim outfielder who had just tied a major league record. "I haven't been hitting for two weeks."

Northrup said he was just trying to get a fly ball when he hit his first grand slam in six-run fifth inning off one of Eddie Fisher's knuckleballs.

"The second time, I was thinking more of myself," he continued. "I said to myself, 'Here's your chance to tie the record.'"

His second grand slam came off a fastball by Billy Rohr in the sixth inning, when the Tigers scored five runs.

Northrup, a left-handed battered, said his homer off Rohr, a southpaw, came as no surprise because he hits left-handers pretty well, "but I haven't been hitting anybody good this year."

Northrup, who has six career grand slams, is the seventh player to hit two in one game. However, Baltimore's Jim Gentile was the only one of the previous six to do it in successive innings. He hit grnd slams in the first and second innings of a 1961 game.

"The week for week end skippers has arrived," says John Fleming, Director of the National Safety Council's Public Department." By Presidential proclamation, June 30 thru July 6th has been declared National Safe Boating Week."

From coast to coast, local chapters of the 19 groups forming the National Safe Boating Committee will present demonstrations and activities emphasizing boating safety. These groups include the U. S. Coast Guard and the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the U. S. Power Squadrons, local boating clubs, and the National Safety Council. About 7,500 volunteers will spark-plug the week's activities in 1,000 waterfront communities, Fleming announced.

The activities scheduled for the week include safety demonstrations, boat safety clinics, parades, contests, water shows, and free boat safety examinations.

Over 1,100 people lost their lives in boating accidents last year. "An unfortunate fact, says Fleming, is that the majority of these fatalities were drownings and three out of four of these fatalities involved boats with a capacity of less than ten persons."

"The major contributing gactor in small boat drownings," Fleming continued, "is loading the boat beyond it's capacity."

The National Safety Council suggests that all boaters observe the "Ten Commandments of Safe Boating."

. Know your boat
. Don't overload
. Keep a good lookout
. Operate at safe speeds
. Respect the weather
. Take sufficient fuel
. Keep your boat in shape
. Carry necessary equipment
. Secure your boat properly
. Obey the law.

Fleming added that National Safe Boating Week will emphasize the need for safe boating practices throughout the entire boating year.

Since the tragic assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, the general public and our lawmakers in Washington have been stampeded into a mass movement for tougher gun control laws. Most individuals as well as the working press are no more specific than "tougher" and nothing proposed thus far by Congress would have prevented any of the recent assassinations which have started this mass hysteria in the first place.

A large majority of the nation's sportsmen which number in the millions have been willing for many years to accept reasonable controls to keep guns out of the hands of criminals and others who should not have them. They are not willing, however, to accept unreasonable restrictions on honest law-abiding citizens, particularly when they will have little or no effect on crime.

A ban on mail order sale of guns would not have prevented the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and the strict registration of firearms in California did not prevent the death of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

The status of gun control bills is changing so rapidly in Congress that it is impossible to report in Federation members and be up to date.

At this writing, the situation is this: The amendment to the safe streets and crime control bill banning the sale of handguns through the mails has become law.

A similar ban on rifles and shotguns is pending in both houses and has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Action is expected in the Senate Judiciary Committee on June 27. This ban, if passed, would also prevent the exchange of firearms between individuals from different states, including rare sporting arms which no longer are available over the counter.

Another bill to provide for the registration of all firearms is also pending.

The Federation has written the Missouri delegation in Congress urging them to exercise a great deal of care in considering gun control legislation and to base their decisions on sound judgment rather than emotion or mass pressure which is based on emotion.

Lawmakers should consider what effect pending legislation will have on crime and what effect it will have on their law-abiding constituents.

We urge all Federation members to let their Congressmen and Senators know their feelings on this important issue. ACT NOW! Time is of the eseence and your constitutional rights may be in jeopardy.

Leo's Lesson Learned As Cardinals Lose 6-2

A lot of things irk Leo Durocher. One of them is a lack of hustle from his Chicago Cubs.

The Lip decided to do something about it Saturday—he slapped a $200 fine on one of his players for loafing on the basepaths.

Every single Cub hustled Sunday...all the way to a 8-2 conquest of St. Louis' National League leaders. It was the second victory in the three-game series for Chicago, loser of 11 of 12 games before the Cardinals came to town.

But St. Louis held on to its 6 1/2 game lead as Cincinnati whipped San Francisco 5-3 and Los Angeles edged Atlanta 3-2. In other games, New York nipped Houston 1-0 and Pittsburgh stopped Philadelphia 5-2.

Chicago trounced first-place Detroit 12-0, California sailed past Washington 8-4, Baltimore beat Minnesota 6-4, New York checked Oakland 4-2 and Cleveland stopped Boston 7-5 in 10 innings in the American League.

What made the Cubs' victory especially sweet was that it came against old nemesis Steve Carlton.

The left-hander, who had banished the Cubs twice earlier this season including once on a onehitter, was the victim of a three-run uprising in the first inning, then was chased with two more in the fifth.

Singles by Glenn Beckert, Billy Williams and Randy Hundley staked starter Bill Hands, 7-5, to the early lead. The Cubs mixed another single by Williams, Ernie Banks' double and an infield out for the two in the fifth and Jim Hickman lashed a solo homer in the eighth.

Bob Tolan had an eighth-inning homer for the Cards.

Pete Rose's two-run homer and four singles by Lee May powered Cincinnati to a 5-0 lead before San Francisco staged a late eruption.

The Giants combined singles by Jim Hart, Bobby Bonds, pinchhitter Dave Marshall and Dick Dietz for two runs in the eighth, and Hart singled in another in the ninth before Gerry Arrigo and Clay Carroll quieted things down.

Los Angeles made Ken Boyer's second RBI of the day in the third inning stand up to turn back Atlanta. The Braves had tied it 2-2 in the third on Felipe Alou's two-run double.

But the Dodgers came right back on Len Gabrielson's double, Tom Haller's single and Boyer's ground out. Jim "Mudcat" Grant, 3-3, won on a fivehitter.

Pittsburgh rode Willie Stargell's two-run homer in the eighth to its fourth straight victory—handing the Phils their fourth straight defeat.

Astro Denis Menke's confusion over a routine forceout led to New York's only run in the fifth.

Ron Swoboda walked and took third on Jerry Grote's single. Greg Goossen then bounced to second and when Grote stopped in the baseline, Menke tried to tag him out, but lost the ball, permitting Swoboda to score.

Tom Seaver, who struck out eight including five in the first two innings, won his seventh game and fifth straight on a five-hitter.

MIAMI (AP)—Johnny beckman, the first man to be elected to basketball's hall of Fame after 27 years with the original new York Celtics of the old american Basketball League, died at the age of 75.

37,000 Expected At Goose Egg Game

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There has been much debate about the drabness of runless innings and low-score baseball games. Yet more than 37,000 are expected at Dodger Stadium tonight, paying to see two pitchers try to blank each other.

For Los Angeles it will be Don Drysdale, who on June 5 set a major league record by pitching his sixth straight shutout.

Last Wednesday in St. Louis the Cardinals' Bob Gibson hurled his fifth consecutive blank job and shoots tonight for No. 6.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who may not fancy the honor, bowed to Big D 5-0 and to Gibson 3-0. Both the 32-year-old Gibson and Drysdale, 31, are righthanders. Drysdale goes against the National League leaders with a 10-4 season record. Gibson is 9-5 but has won six straight games.

Gibson, who insists he is interested not in records but in winning, is challenging another all-time record that Drysdale set in his brilliant string.

After shutting out the Pirates, Drysdale pitched 4 2-3 scoreless innings against Philadelphia and his record stands at 58 2-3 innings.

Gibson's row of goose eggs stands at 48. It would take extra innings of scoreless ball to eclipse the Drysdale mark, of course.

Last week in St. Louis Gibson declared, "I'm not looking forward to a shutout. I'm looking forward to a win. I only pitched once against Drysdale this year and he beat me, 1-0."

Appreciable progress in solving the problems of realigning and expanding minor league baseball was reported following a six-hour meeting of an expansion committee Monday.

But the committee chairman, Bob Howsam, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, declined to discuss details of the project "mainly because we still are in the exploratory phases."

"We discussed the problems of realignment in accordance with major league expansion and are forwarding our findings to a special planning committee," Howsam added.

New farm outlets must be established at each level of the minors because of the additions of San Diego, Seattle, Kansas City and Montreal to the majors.

Howsam's committee right now is primarily concerned with the stockpiling of 24 Class AAA clubs. "After those are ascertained and established we'll concentrate on double-A working agreements, then the Class A levels," he said.

Since two Pacific Coast League cities, Seattle and San Diego, are committed to the majors in 1969 and a third city, Tacoma, is apt to lose its franchise because of the proximity of Seattle, realignment of the PCL is inevitable.

There is speculation that the PCL and the Class AAA International League may merge to form three eight-team divisions.

Jim Northrup seemed as pleased about breaking out of his hitting slump as he was with the two grand slam home runs he hit to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 14—3 rout of the Cleveland Indians Monday night.

"That's a heckuva way to come out of a slump isn't it?" inquired the tall, slim outfielder who had just tied a major league record. "I haven't been hitting for two weeks."

Northrup said he was just trying to get a fly ball when he hit his first grand slam in six-run fifth inning off one of Eddie Fisher's knuckleballs.

"The second time, I was thinking more of myself," he continued. "I said to myself, 'Here's your chance to tie the record.'"

His second grand slam came off a fastball by Billy Rohr in the sixth inning, when the Tigers scored five runs.

Northrup, a left-handed battered, said his homer off Rohr, a southpaw, came as no surprise because he hits left-handers pretty well, "but I haven't been hitting anybody good this year."

Northrup, who has six career grand slams, is the seventh player to hit two in one game. However, Baltimore's Jim Gentile was the only one of the previous six to do it in successive innings. He hit grnd slams in the first and second innings of a 1961 game.

"The week for week end skippers has arrived," says John Fleming, Director of the National Safety Council's Public Department." By Presidential proclamation, June 30 thru July 6th has been declared National Safe Boating Week."

From coast to coast, local chapters of the 19 groups forming the National Safe Boating Committee will present demonstrations and activities emphasizing boating safety. These groups include the U. S. Coast Guard and the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the U. S. Power Squadrons, local boating clubs, and the National Safety Council. About 7,500 volunteers will spark-plug the week's activities in 1,000 waterfront communities, Fleming announced.

The activities scheduled for the week include safety demonstrations, boat safety clinics, parades, contests, water shows, and free boat safety examinations.

Over 1,100 people lost their lives in boating accidents last year. "An unfortunate fact, says Fleming, is that the majority of these fatalities were drownings and three out of four of these fatalities involved boats with a capacity of less than ten persons."

"The major contributing gactor in small boat drownings," Fleming continued, "is loading the boat beyond it's capacity."

The National Safety Council suggests that all boaters observe the "Ten Commandments of Safe Boating."

. Know your boat
. Don't overload
. Keep a good lookout
. Operate at safe speeds
. Respect the weather
. Take sufficient fuel
. Keep your boat in shape
. Carry necessary equipment
. Secure your boat properly
. Obey the law.

Fleming added that National Safe Boating Week will emphasize the need for safe boating practices throughout the entire boating year.

Since the tragic assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, the general public and our lawmakers in Washington have been stampeded into a mass movement for tougher gun control laws. Most individuals as well as the working press are no more specific than "tougher" and nothing proposed thus far by Congress would have prevented any of the recent assassinations which have started this mass hysteria in the first place.

A large majority of the nation's sportsmen which number in the millions have been willing for many years to accept reasonable controls to keep guns out of the hands of criminals and others who should not have them. They are not willing, however, to accept unreasonable restrictions on honest law-abiding citizens, particularly when they will have little or no effect on crime.

A ban on mail order sale of guns would not have prevented the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and the strict registration of firearms in California did not prevent the death of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

The status of gun control bills is changing so rapidly in Congress that it is impossible to report in Federation members and be up to date.

At this writing, the situation is this: The amendment to the safe streets and crime control bill banning the sale of handguns through the mails has become law.

A similar ban on rifles and shotguns is pending in both houses and has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Action is expected in the Senate Judiciary Committee on June 27. This ban, if passed, would also prevent the exchange of firearms between individuals from different states, including rare sporting arms which no longer are available over the counter.

Another bill to provide for the registration of all firearms is also pending.

The Federation has written the Missouri delegation in Congress urging them to exercise a great deal of care in considering gun control legislation and to base their decisions on sound judgment rather than emotion or mass pressure which is based on emotion.

Lawmakers should consider what effect pending legislation will have on crime and what effect it will have on their law-abiding constituents.

We urge all Federation members to let their Congressmen and Senators know their feelings on this important issue. ACT NOW! Time is of the eseence and your constitutional rights may be in jeopardy.

Leo's Lesson Learned As Cardinals Lose 6-2

A lot of things irk Leo Durocher. One of them is a lack of hustle from his Chicago Cubs.

The Lip decided to do something about it Saturday—he slapped a $200 fine on one of his players for loafing on the basepaths.

Every single Cub hustled Sunday...all the way to a 8-2 conquest of St. Louis' National League leaders. It was the second victory in the three-game series for Chicago, loser of 11 of 12 games before the Cardinals came to town.

But St. Louis held on to its 6 1/2 game lead as Cincinnati whipped San Francisco 5-3 and Los Angeles edged Atlanta 3-2. In other games, New York nipped Houston 1-0 and Pittsburgh stopped Philadelphia 5-2.

Chicago trounced first-place Detroit 12-0, California sailed past Washington 8-4, Baltimore beat Minnesota 6-4, New York checked Oakland 4-2 and Cleveland stopped Boston 7-5 in 10 innings in the American League.

What made the Cubs' victory especially sweet was that it came against old nemesis Steve Carlton.

The left-hander, who had banished the Cubs twice earlier this season including once on a onehitter, was the victim of a three-run uprising in the first inning, then was chased with two more in the fifth.

Singles by Glenn Beckert, Billy Williams and Randy Hundley staked starter Bill Hands, 7-5, to the early lead. The Cubs mixed another single by Williams, Ernie Banks' double and an infield out for the two in the fifth and Jim Hickman lashed a solo homer in the eighth.

Bob Tolan had an eighth-inning homer for the Cards.

Pete Rose's two-run homer and four singles by Lee May powered Cincinnati to a 5-0 lead before San Francisco staged a late eruption.

The Giants combined singles by Jim Hart, Bobby Bonds, pinchhitter Dave Marshall and Dick Dietz for two runs in the eighth, and Hart singled in another in the ninth before Gerry Arrigo and Clay Carroll quieted things down.

Los Angeles made Ken Boyer's second RBI of the day in the third inning stand up to turn back Atlanta. The Braves had tied it 2-2 in the third on Felipe Alou's two-run double.

But the Dodgers came right back on Len Gabrielson's double, Tom Haller's single and Boyer's ground out. Jim "Mudcat" Grant, 3-3, won on a fivehitter.

Pittsburgh rode Willie Stargell's two-run homer in the eighth to its fourth straight victory—handing the Phils their fourth straight defeat.

Astro Denis Menke's confusion over a routine forceout led to New York's only run in the fifth.

Ron Swoboda walked and took third on Jerry Grote's single. Greg Goossen then bounced to second and when Grote stopped in the baseline, Menke tried to tag him out, but lost the ball, permitting Swoboda to score.

Tom Seaver, who struck out eight including five in the first two innings, won his seventh game and fifth straight on a five-hitter.

37,000 Expected At Goose Egg Game

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There has been much debate about the drabness of runless innings and low-score baseball games. Yet more than 37,000 are expected at Dodger Stadium tonight, paying to see two pitchers try to blank each other.

For Los Angeles it will be Don Drysdale, who on June 5 set a major league record by pitching his sixth straight shutout.

Last Wednesday in St. Louis the Cardinals' Bob Gibson hurled his fifth consecutive blank job and shoots tonight for No. 6.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who may not fancy the honor, bowed to Big D 5-0 and to Gibson 3-0. Both the 32-year-old Gibson and Drysdale, 31, are righthanders. Drysdale goes against the National League leaders with a 10-4 season record. Gibson is 9-5 but has won six straight games.

Gibson, who insists he is interested not in records but in winning, is challenging another all-time record that Drysdale set in his brilliant string.

After shutting out the Pirates, Drysdale pitched 4 2-3 scoreless innings against Philadelphia and his record stands at 58 2-3 innings.

Gibson's row of goose eggs stands at 48. It would take extra innings of scoreless ball to eclipse the Drysdale mark, of course.

Last week in St. Louis Gibson declared, "I'm not looking forward to a shutout. I'm looking forward to a win. I only pitched once against Drysdale this year and he beat me, 1-0."

Stock Fees Probed in SEC Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission, in one of its rare open hearings, is investigating the cost of buying and selling stocks in the United States.

In a series of hearings opening today, the SEC expects to question staff experts from the New York Stock Exchange on the minimum fee structure under which the major exchanges set the cost of buying and selling stock.

The SEC, which has held public hearings only once or twice over the last 20 years, also will check into the practice of fee splitting among major brokerage houses.

Just last week, in an apparent attempt to strengthen their planned defense of minimum commissions, the New York and American exchanges voted to eliminate fee splitting and grant a discount on fees for large transactions.

The SEC said the initial phase of its hearings will run through July and will be devoted to gathering facts on minimum rates.

In August, the SEC will turn its attention to economic and legal aspects.

Included in the first phase will be an examination into who pays the fees and commissions, how they are computed and how they are distributed and shared.

The Justice Department has challenged the entire system of minimum fees and contends they should be set by competition. If anything, a maximum fee is needed to protect investors from excessive costs, the Justice Department maintains.

In scheduling the hearings, the SEC opened the entire minimum rate schedule for scrutiny and suggested an interim reduction of fees by the New York exchange to take effect Sept. 15.

As an option the exchange could eliminate minimum fees on transactions exceeding $50,000 and open the way for cuts through negotiation between the parties.

Other national exchanges were asked to consider cuts but no deadline or specific proposals were made by the SEC. Normally, the New York exchange sets the pace for the industry.

The interim schedule proposed by the commission could result in substantial savings to investors, especially on large orders.

On a 5,000-share purchase of a $30 stock, for example, the present fee is $1,700. It would be $914 under the commission's schedule, a savings of $786.

Historic Ice House Turns Into Theater

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — A six-week stand of "Huckleberry Finn" and four other productions will begin Tuesday night in the Hannibal Ice House Theater, a new era in the many-faceted life of the old building.

A part of Hannibal's history since 1854 when Stillwell Cold Storage was established as the first ice house west of the Mississippi River, the ice house was once the home of ham.

Dressing rooms, stage and seats all occupy space now that was once devoted to Star, Sterling and Export Brands of Stillwell hams when that Missouri hog product earned recognition for this area on European and domestic tables.

Meat packing was discontinued in the building in 1912 and the sale of artificial ice, first manufactured here in 1880, and the winter storage of apples became the building's main purpose.

The plays to be produced through Aug. 10 in the renovated Ice House Theater will be directed by J.F. Severas and Alfred Srnka of the drama faculty at Northeast Missouri State College. In addition to Huckleberry Finn there will be Luv, Picnic, You Can't Take It With You, and Thurber Carnival.

Province Named Soils Commissioner

CHARLESTON -- Art Province has been named district supervisor of one of 27 new Missouri conservation districts approved by the Conservation Commission.

Each of the nine regions of the state will be divided into three districts, including from three to six counties per district.

Other southeast Missouri district supervisors are Chester Barnes of Poplar Bluff, Doyle Beck, Potosi, Earl Kinder, Van Buren, Donald J. May, Dexter.

Pronvince's district will probably include Mississippi, Scott, New Madrid and Pemiscot Counties.

Mrs. Walter M. Bush was the nation's first licensed woman driver. She got a steam engineer's license in 1900 and drove a Locomobile.

Stock Fees Probed in SEC Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission, in one of its rare open hearings, is investigating the cost of buying and selling stocks in the United States.

In a series of hearings opening today, the SEC expects to question staff experts from the New York Stock Exchange on the minimum fee structure under which the major exchanges set the cost of buying and selling stock.

The SEC, which has held public hearings only once or twice over the last 20 years, also will check into the practice of fee splitting among major brokerage houses.

Just last week, in an apparent attempt to strengthen their planned defense of minimum commissions, the New York and American exchanges voted to eliminate fee splitting and grant a discount on fees for large transactions.

The SEC said the initial phase of its hearings will run through July and will be devoted to gathering facts on minimum rates.

In August, the SEC will turn its attention to economic and legal aspects.

Included in the first phase will be an examination into who pays the fees and commissions, how they are computed and how they are distributed and shared.

The Justice Department has challenged the entire system of minimum fees and contends they should be set by competition. If anything, a maximum fee is needed to protect investors from excessive costs, the Justice Department maintains.

In scheduling the hearings, the SEC opened the entire minimum rate schedule for scrutiny and suggested an interim reduction of fees by the New York exchange to take effect Sept. 15.

As an option the exchange could eliminate minimum fees on transactions exceeding $50,000 and open the way for cuts through negotiation between the parties.

Other national exchanges were asked to consider cuts but no deadline or specific proposals were made by the SEC. Normally, the New York exchange sets the pace for the industry.

The interim schedule proposed by the commission could result in substantial savings to investors, especially on large orders.

On a 5,000-share purchase of a $30 stock, for example, the present fee is $1,700. It would be $914 under the commission's schedule, a savings of $786.

Historic Ice House Turns Into Theater

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — A six-week stand of "Huckleberry Finn" and four other productions will begin Tuesday night in the Hannibal Ice House Theater, a new era in the many-faceted life of the old building.

A part of Hannibal's history since 1854 when Stillwell Cold Storage was established as the first ice house west of the Mississippi River, the ice house was once the home of ham.

Dressing rooms, stage and seats all occupy space now that was once devoted to Star, Sterling and Export Brands of Stillwell hams when that Missouri hog product earned recognition for this area on European and domestic tables.

Meat packing was discontinued in the building in 1912 and the sale of artificial ice, first manufactured here in 1880, and the winter storage of apples became the building's main purpose.

The plays to be produced through Aug. 10 in the renovated Ice House Theater will be directed by J.F. Severas and Alfred Srnka of the drama faculty at Northeast Missouri State College. In addition to Huckleberry Finn there will be Luv, Picnic, You Can't Take It With You, and Thurber Carnival.

Province Named Soils Commissioner

CHARLESTON -- Art Province has been named district supervisor of one of 27 new Missouri conservation districts approved by the Conservation Commission.

Each of the nine regions of the state will be divided into three districts, including from three to six counties per district.

Other southeast Missouri district supervisors are Chester Barnes of Poplar Bluff, Doyle Beck, Potosi, Earl Kinder, Van Buren, Donald J. May, Dexter.

Pronvince's district will probably include Mississippi, Scott, New Madrid and Pemiscot Counties.

Mrs. Walter M. Bush was the nation's first licensed woman driver. She got a steam engineer's license in 1900 and drove a Locomobile.

Cotton Farmers Seek Greater Market Share

MEMPHIS -- "Cotton farmers obviously are determined to fight for a greater share of the expanding market for fibers," George C. Cortright, Jr., chairman of the cotton board, said today.

As evidence, the Rolling Fork, Miss., cotton producer cited the collection to date of almost $7 million for research and promotion from the small 1967-68 cotton crop.

Cortright said funds now in transit to the board will push the collections to well above the $7-million mark. A total of $6,972,000 had been received as of June 27.

"The extremely low level of refunds -- only three per cent of collections-- strongly emphasizes the great value which cotton farmers place on research and promotion and certainly shows they are determined to compete with other fibers for markets," Mr. Cortright said.

Established under the Cotton Research and Promotion Act, the collections are on cotton sold prior to June 1, 1968.

The total represents about 95 per cent of the 7,366,000 bales of upland cotton ginned during the 1967-68 season as reported by the department of commerce, Cortright explained.

He said most of the small differences between ginnings and collections have been accounted for as: (1) in transit collections reported but not yet received; (2) assessments to be remitted by collecting handlers during July on cotton sold since June 1; and (3) cotton still held by growers on which the assessment is not yet due.

The board chairman commended producers, ginners, collecting handlers, and other branches of the industry for their excellent cooperation in behalf of the program.

"As in any effort involving a great many people there have been a few who have not lived up to the requirements of the regulations," Cortright said. "However, these are at a minimum, and appropriate steps are being taken to deal with the problem."

Despite a short crop, the net cost of operating the Cotton Board and administering the collection, accounting, and refund system during the first 15 months amounted to only one per cent of collections, Mr. Cortright said.

"This means 99 cents out of every dollar is going for an operating research and promotion program. Certainly this is efficiency at its best, and is what the sponsors of the Research and Promotion Act intended. We know growers and other industry members will be highly pleased," the Cotton Board chairman said.

He added the low operational cost points up the fact that an effective system for handling the program has been established in the first year, and commended the staff of the Cotton Board for their role in accomplishing this objective.

He stated that an additional report, giving a breakdown of collections by states, will be issued when the first year's program is more substantially complete.

The Missouri board members and his alternate are: K. M. Streeter, Painton, and Frank Stanley, Sikeston.

Some cars are talking big price slashes.
They know what they're worth.

Pity the poor car that doesn't become attractive until it has its price cut. Pity it. But don't buy it.
Buy instead a car that sales figures prove is attractive all year long. Chevrolet, America's favorite. (Now all the more attractive, with special savings on V8 engines and automatic transmissions.)
A car with windshield wipers that stay out of sight until you turn them on, and an automatic alarm system that warns you not to leave your keys.

The simple truth is: we can afford to put more into each car we build, because we build more cars.
Putting you first keeps us first. See your Chevrolet dealer last, for good sound savings on all 1968 models.

year-end savings just where you'd expect to.

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY COMING TO MISSOURI?

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. -- Missouri may be on the verge of moving into the national spotlight by establishing presidential primaries.

The initiative may come from two directions. An Election Law Study Commission has finished taking testimony on the idea and could make a recommendation to the next regular session of the legislature. Secondly, a statewide petition movement is trying to put the proposal on the ballot.

The study commission, which is studying several other law reforms, has not made any decisions yet. It has until the end of the year, when it will be automatically dissolved, to prepare a report.

The 16-member commission is composed of five senators, five representatives, five persons appointed by the governor, and James C. Kirkpatrick, secretary of state.

There are two types of presidential primaries -- preferential and binding. The preferential does not bind party delegates to voting for the winner of the primary elections at the national conventions.

Proponents of primaries praise them because they give the voters a choice. Sen. Omer H. Avery, (D-21st District) chairman of the commission, however, disagrees: "Most presidential primaries are not binding. They don't mean anything. They don't necessarily give the voter a choice."

Kirkpatrick, however, favors the primary because of the national attention that would be focused on Missouri. He points out that the 15 states with primaries get more attention during election years.

Avery contends the publicity is short-lived and of little value.

Whatever the recommendations of the commission, the proposal could reach the November ballot through other channels. A petition drive has been collecting signatures in the St. Louis and Kansas City areas and some outstate areas such as Cole and Boone counties. The drive is led by a citizens group called the Missouri Presidential Preference Committe.

To get the proposal on the ballot, the group must collect about 56,000 signatures (five per cent of the voters in seven congressional districts) by July 5.

The petition calls for a binding primary for all generally recognized candidates of each party to be held on the second Tuesday after the first Monday in May of an election year.

In addition to the primary proposal, the study commission has been studying voting age requirements, absentee ballot laws, uniform voting hours and statewide registration.

Making voting hours uniform would ease the burden of some election officials who now must open the polls at 7 a.m. and take in only a handful of votes for the first hour, Avery said. "The earlier hours aren't necessary because everyone gets off work for three hours on election day," he commented.

Avery also favors revision of absentee ballot laws to enable the absentee votes to be counted at the same time as other votes and statewide registration to prevent people from voting twice.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT cIS ON AUGUST 6 BALLOTS

On Tuesday, August 6th, Missourians will vote in a special election on a constitutional amendment to determine the order of succession to the governor's office in case of a vacancy.

If passed, the amendment would add four persons to the present line of succession, which consists of the lieutenant governor, president pro tempore of the senate and speaker of the house, in that order. The amendment provides that secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer and attorney general, in that order, would be next in line if the speaker of the house vacated the governor's office.

The amendment then, adds four persons to the present order of succession, providing guidelines in case of a rapid series of vacancies as might occur in a large disaster.

A vacancy in the governor's office can be caused by death, resignation, impeachment, inability to fulfill the duties or the governor's absence from the State.

The amendment also would establish two procedures for determining the inability of a governor to fulfill his duties:

(1) A governor can present a written declaration to the president pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House saying he is unable to carry on with his duties. The next in succession would take office automatically. A governor could re-gain the office by the same method if the disablility were removed.

(2) A disability board, made up of the seven persons in the line of succession plus the majority floor leaders of the Senate and the House, could, by a majority vote, have a governor removed from office for a disability. However, if a governor did not agree that he was disabled, he could appeal to the board. If the board turned himdown, the decision would be up to the Supreme Court of Missouri.

Martin Says TV Humor Catching up

By DICK MARTIN

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dick Martin, writing for both halves of the comedy team of Rowan and Martin, drops his buffoon's mask to discuss seriously the impact of humor in a mass medium. The team, successful in clubs and as television guest stars for years, have shot to the peak of success during the past season as stars of the hit NBC variety show, "Laugh-in" with its new, furiously paced format.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Why does America need more freedom in its comedy?

Let's put this question in context—in television, because, let's face it, that's where it's all happening.

As Dan and I see it, the acceleration of change in our institutions, that is both political and social, is so fast that it takes a broad stroke to paint a picture of what is happening now.

The broad stroke is comedy because it's the most devastating stroke you can use. Maybe devastating isn't the proper word, but in this sense we think it applies.

We can illustrate what is happening out there in "the real world" in a flash on television, make it burlesque, fast and explosive. You see it for what it is. That's the style of our times and finally television is catching up.

In the past, it seems to both of us, TV didn't lead, it followed. The pace was set by commercial interests and the material was written and illustrated accordingly. Now we see a change where the pace of the material is passing the commercials— and, of course, I am talking about our show.

I sound as though we're taking the credits for this but please don't misunderstand. The pace really was set a long time ago, underground, by comedians like Lennie Bruce, Jonathan Winters, Buddy Hackett and ourselves. We were all out there in the clubs popping Mary Poppins out of her tree while motion pictures were breaking down barriers in their own field.

Then came the Smothers Brothers. Thanks to their guts in relating their material directly to what youth was thinking, comedy started breaking out on television at a pace and in areas that were theretofore considered taboo. I think we came into the medium and took it all that much further.

And there's Jonathan Winters. If Winters were allowed to fly he could give us all a tremendous run for our lives. The only thing that is keeping him down is the old-fashioned format of his show. Three years ago even Winters would have been cut to pieces by the censors. I can see where he's picking up tremendous freedom as a consequence of the changing times.

But at the root of the matter lies the fact that comedy is a buffer for social changes. If you can see some humor in it, then the change becomes more palatable. We can deal with subjects in our show like race, religion, funerals, politics and motherhood—any fast evolving institution—and cut them to the bone.

How do we get away with it? Because the public is hip, because the medium is hip, the material is hip and its fast and that is exactly what is happening.

Celebrations Touched off by De Gaulle Win

PARIS (AP) — With automobile horns blaring and flags flying, Frenchmen poured into the streets of Paris Sunday night to celebrate President Charles de Gaulle's massive election victory.

Flag-decked cars packed with cheering Frenchmen surged through the Champs Elysees and other parts of Paris.

Many of the flags bore the Cross of Lorraine, which De Gaulle chose as the symbol of the Free French forces in World War II.

But not all Parisians celebrated.

In the Latin Quarter, home of the Sorbonne, university students blocked the victory parades with improvised barricades, and stoned the cars. They tore off the French tricolors and marched off waving the red portions of the flags.

It was the students of the University of Paris whose rebellion unleashed the May crisis which caused De Gaulle to dissolve the National Assembly and call the elections.

"Even the Communists must have voted for the Gaullists," said one youth outside the medical school, which is still occupied by the students.

HIGHLIGHTS AND SIDELIGHTS FROM YOUR STATE CAPITOL

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY COMING TO MISSOURI?

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. -- Missouri may be on the verge of moving into the national spotlight by establishing presidential primaries.

The initiative may come from two directions. An Election Law Study Commission has finished taking testimony on the idea and could make a recommendation to the next regular session of the legislature. Secondly, a statewide petition movement is trying to put the proposal on the ballot.

The study commission, which is studying several other law reforms, has not made any decisions yet. It has until the end of the year, when it will be automatically dissolved, to prepare a report.

The 16-member commission is composed of five senators, five representatives, five persons appointed by the governor, and James C. Kirkpatrick, secretary of state.

There are two types of presidential primaries -- preferential and binding. The preferential does not bind party delegates to voting for the winner of the primary elections at the national conventions.

Proponents of primaries praise them because they give the voters a choice. Sen. Omer H. Avery, (D-21st District) chairman of the commission, however, disagrees: "Most presidential primaries are not binding. They don't mean anything. They don't necessarily give the voter a choice."

Kirkpatrick, however, favors the primary because of the national attention that would be focused on Missouri. He points out that the 15 states with primaries get more attention during election years.

Avery contends the publicity is short-lived and of little value.

Whatever the recommendations of the commission, the proposal could reach the November ballot through other channels. A petition drive has been collecting signatures in the St. Louis and Kansas City areas and some outstate areas such as Cole and Boone counties. The drive is led by a citizens group called the Missouri Presidential Preference Committe.

To get the proposal on the ballot, the group must collect about 56,000 signatures (five per cent of the voters in seven congressional districts) by July 5.

The petition calls for a binding primary for all generally recognized candidates of each party to be held on the second Tuesday after the first Monday in May of an election year.

In addition to the primary proposal, the study commission has been studying voting age requirements, absentee ballot laws, uniform voting hours and statewide registration.

Making voting hours uniform would ease the burden of some election officials who now must open the polls at 7 a.m. and take in only a handful of votes for the first hour, Avery said. "The earlier hours aren't necessary because everyone gets off work for three hours on election day," he commented.

Avery also favors revision of absentee ballot laws to enable the absentee votes to be counted at the same time as other votes and statewide registration to prevent people from voting twice.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT cIS ON AUGUST 6 BALLOTS

On Tuesday, August 6th, Missourians will vote in a special election on a constitutional amendment to determine the order of succession to the governor's office in case of a vacancy.

If passed, the amendment would add four persons to the present line of succession, which consists of the lieutenant governor, president pro tempore of the senate and speaker of the house, in that order. The amendment provides that secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer and attorney general, in that order, would be next in line if the speaker of the house vacated the governor's office.

The amendment then, adds four persons to the present order of succession, providing guidelines in case of a rapid series of vacancies as might occur in a large disaster.

A vacancy in the governor's office can be caused by death, resignation, impeachment, inability to fulfill the duties or the governor's absence from the State.

The amendment also would establish two procedures for determining the inability of a governor to fulfill his duties:

(1) A governor can present a written declaration to the president pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House saying he is unable to carry on with his duties. The next in succession would take office automatically. A governor could re-gain the office by the same method if the disablility were removed.

(2) A disability board, made up of the seven persons in the line of succession plus the majority floor leaders of the Senate and the House, could, by a majority vote, have a governor removed from office for a disability. However, if a governor did not agree that he was disabled, he could appeal to the board. If the board turned himdown, the decision would be up to the Supreme Court of Missouri.

Martin Says TV Humor Catching up

By DICK MARTIN

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dick Martin, writing for both halves of the comedy team of Rowan and Martin, drops his buffoon's mask to discuss seriously the impact of humor in a mass medium. The team, successful in clubs and as television guest stars for years, have shot to the peak of success during the past season as stars of the hit NBC variety show, "Laugh-in" with its new, furiously paced format.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Why does America need more freedom in its comedy?

Let's put this question in context—in television, because, let's face it, that's where it's all happening.

As Dan and I see it, the acceleration of change in our institutions, that is both political and social, is so fast that it takes a broad stroke to paint a picture of what is happening now.

The broad stroke is comedy because it's the most devastating stroke you can use. Maybe devastating isn't the proper word, but in this sense we think it applies.

We can illustrate what is happening out there in "the real world" in a flash on television, make it burlesque, fast and explosive. You see it for what it is. That's the style of our times and finally television is catching up.

In the past, it seems to both of us, TV didn't lead, it followed. The pace was set by commercial interests and the material was written and illustrated accordingly. Now we see a change where the pace of the material is passing the commercials— and, of course, I am talking about our show.

I sound as though we're taking the credits for this but please don't misunderstand. The pace really was set a long time ago, underground, by comedians like Lennie Bruce, Jonathan Winters, Buddy Hackett and ourselves. We were all out there in the clubs popping Mary Poppins out of her tree while motion pictures were breaking down barriers in their own field.

Then came the Smothers Brothers. Thanks to their guts in relating their material directly to what youth was thinking, comedy started breaking out on television at a pace and in areas that were theretofore considered taboo. I think we came into the medium and took it all that much further.

And there's Jonathan Winters. If Winters were allowed to fly he could give us all a tremendous run for our lives. The only thing that is keeping him down is the old-fashioned format of his show. Three years ago even Winters would have been cut to pieces by the censors. I can see where he's picking up tremendous freedom as a consequence of the changing times.

But at the root of the matter lies the fact that comedy is a buffer for social changes. If you can see some humor in it, then the change becomes more palatable. We can deal with subjects in our show like race, religion, funerals, politics and motherhood—any fast evolving institution—and cut them to the bone.

How do we get away with it? Because the public is hip, because the medium is hip, the material is hip and its fast and that is exactly what is happening.

Celebrations Touched off by De Gaulle Win

PARIS (AP) — With automobile horns blaring and flags flying, Frenchmen poured into the streets of Paris Sunday night to celebrate President Charles de Gaulle's massive election victory.

Flag-decked cars packed with cheering Frenchmen surged through the Champs Elysees and other parts of Paris.

Many of the flags bore the Cross of Lorraine, which De Gaulle chose as the symbol of the Free French forces in World War II.

But not all Parisians celebrated.

In the Latin Quarter, home of the Sorbonne, university students blocked the victory parades with improvised barricades, and stoned the cars. They tore off the French tricolors and marched off waving the red portions of the flags.

It was the students of the University of Paris whose rebellion unleashed the May crisis which caused De Gaulle to dissolve the National Assembly and call the elections.

"Even the Communists must have voted for the Gaullists," said one youth outside the medical school, which is still occupied by the students.

Bombing Halt Eases Red Economic Strain

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence reports indicate North Vietnam's food problems may be easing because much of the country is free from U.S. bombing.

Analysts say there is evidence that thousands of North Vietnamese civilians, mobilized during the bombings to repair roads and railroads, are returning to farming.

U.S. reconnaissance has detected intensive farming on rice lands in the Red River Delta which lay fallow during the bombing period because, analysts said, the peasants were used to keep supply routes open.

For more than a year, North Vietnam reportedly has been sustained by wheat and wheat flour shipments, mostly from the Soviet Union.

But now there are fewer food ships arriving at Haiphong and other North Vietnamese ports, the analysts said.

Cargoes observed being unloaded in North Vietnamese ports include large tonnages of fertilizer. Meanwhile, petroleum products have returned to top place, over food, in shipments landing by sea in North Vietnam.

U.S. intelligence estimates that between 150,000 and 250,000 North Vietnamese civilians have gone back to work since the current U.S. bombing limitations went into effect March 31.

Former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara repeatedly told Congress that more than 500,000 persons had been diverted by the North Vietnamese government from farming and other jobs to maintain and repair lines of communication battered by U.S. bombs and rockets.

He cited this in an effort to show how the bombing created a burden for North Vietnam, a country which always has had a marginal food supply and only a primitive industrial system.

American intelligence officers reported some major permanent repairs to important facilities along lines of communication since President Johnson invoked the ban on U.S. bombing north of the 20th parallel.

The huge Doumer bridge, slammed repeatedly by U.S. bombers, was said to have been rebuilt and two shattered spans replaced.

Trains are starting to use the big bridge which crosses the Red River close to Hanoi. Roadbeds on the bridge have been prepared for trucks, but have not yet been surfaced.

Meanwhile, sources said, the rail lines have been adapted with an adjustable third rail. This is so freight cars can roll along the entire route through China and North Vietnam without, as in the past, requiring transshipment of the North Vietnamese border to cars of a different gauge.

LIFE-GIVING FLOW OF WATER reaches end of corn field on the George Killion farm at Portageville. A berm across end of field holds the water so that lower end gets adequate soaking before water is allowed to drain off.

Irrigation Season Starts

PORTAGEVILLE - The irrigation season has started earlier than usual in Southeast Missouri reports E. B. Nace, area farm management agent, at the Delta Center. Extreme dry weather in some spots and some corn that is earlier than usual has brought on the need for irrigation at this time. It is probable that the late April and early May plantings will need two to three irrigations.

Some corn was in full tassel on June 15th. From early tasseling to full filling of the ears is a time of critical moisture needs for corn, Nace says. For a bumper crop, corn needs either sufficient rainfall or supplemental irrigation during this period. In fact corn should be well supplied with moisture until the ears begin to turn down.

The minimum depth to irrigate corn is two feet and the maximum is three feet. This means that the soil should be wet this deep before the irrigation system is shut off. Some farmers practice irrigating every other row until the field is covered, then the system is changed to irrigate the rows that we skipped. This has two definite advantages. You can keep corn from suffering moisture stress by getting over a larger acreage in half the time and in case of a rainstorm, half the corn roots are in firm soil so that it does not blow over easily. Winds usually come in advance of rain during thunderstorms.

On average summer days, water loss from the soil by evaporation and by transpiration from the plants will be one-quarter inch. On extremely hot days when humidity is low, full-grown corn plants may take out twice this amount. Farmers should become thoroughly familiar with their soil types and the water-holding capacity of each, so that a good approximation of water needs can be worked out.

Three University of Missouri guides are available from Extension offices to help farmers with irrigation: Guide No. 1650 is "When and How Much to Irrigate"; Guide No. 1656 is "Schedule Irrigation with Evaporation Cans"; and Guide No. 1657 is "Schedule Irrigation by Keeping a Balance Sheet on Soil Moisture". These guides have information on all the crops we grow in this area.

Soybeans planted after wheat may need irrigation to get them up and off to a good start. In general, the critical period for soybeans is from full bloom through pod-filling. Beans can stand about two weeks of water stress ordinarily, but long delays will affect pod set and a water shortage during pod-filling will cut bean size.

Cotton's critical water need is from first bloom until three-fourths of the bolls you would like to have, are set. With some of our crop being late, it will be important to get bolls set as early as possible. This means that cotton should not be allowed to suffer a moisture stress during early blooming. Irrigation of cotton should normally be stopped in early August to cut down on vegetative growth so that the cotton will mature normally. Irrigations later than August 10th can lead to trouble if late August and early September rains occur.

On average summer days, water loss from the soil by evaporation and by transpiration from the plants will be one-quarter inch. On extremely hot days when humidity is low, full-grown corn plants may take out twice this amount. Farmers should become thoroughly familiar with their soil types and the water-holding capacity of each, so that a good approximation of water needs can be worked out.

Three University of Missouri guides are available from Extension offices to help farmers with irrigation: Guide No. 1650 is "When and How Much to Irrigate"; Guide No. 1656 is "Schedule Irrigation with Evaporation Cans"; and Guide No. 1657 is "Schedule Irrigation by Keeping a Balance Sheet on Soil Moisture". These guides have information on all the crops we grow in this area.

Soybeans planted after wheat may need irrigation to get them up and off to a good start. In general, the critical period for soybeans is from full bloom through pod-filling. Beans can stand about two weeks of water stress ordinarily, but long delays will affect pod set and a water shortage during pod-filling will cut bean size.

Cotton's critical water need is from first bloom until three-fourths of the bolls you would like to have, are set. With some of our crop being late, it will be important to get bolls set as early as possible. This means that cotton should not be allowed to suffer a moisture stress during early blooming. Irrigation of cotton should normally be stopped in early August to cut down on vegetative growth so that the cotton will mature normally. Irrigations later than August 10th can lead to trouble if late August and early September rains occur.

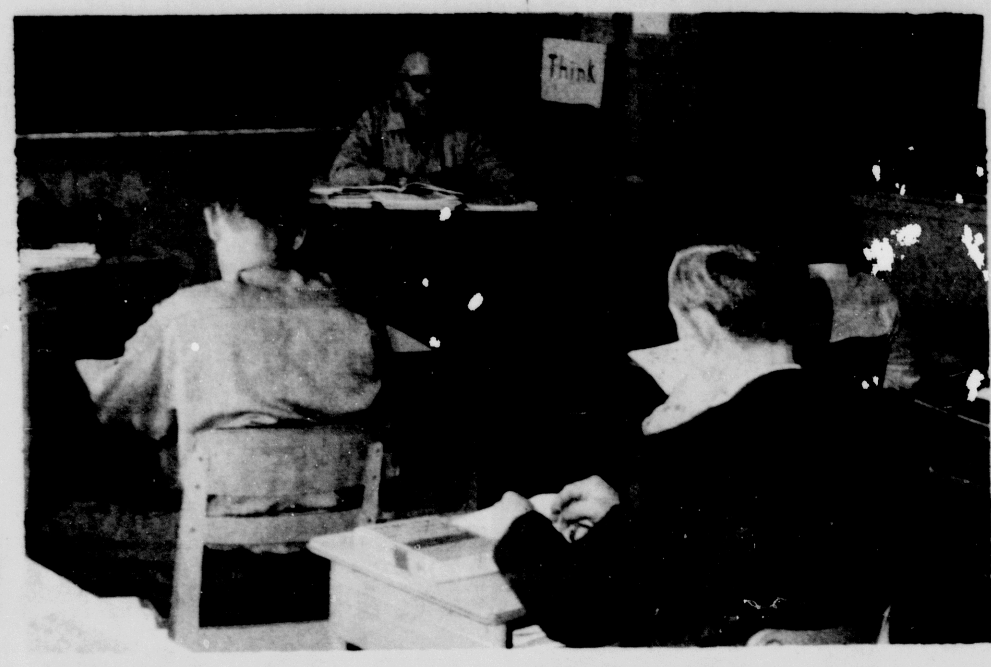
Migrant Worker Often Needs Help To Enter New Field, Earn More

HEADQUARTERS for Missouri Associated migrant opportunity services at Wardell.



PRICE DOUGLASS teaches a class of Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services trainees.

By BARBARA LACY

I went in response to a phone call from Mrs. Burt Rowe, Sr., president of United Church Women in Sikeston.

"You must come she said, "we need a Presbyterian." For it was to be an ecumenical visit to the Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services, Inc., in Wardell, which was initiated by the Missouri Council of Churches and the four Roman Catholic diocese of Missouri.

We. Mrs. David Croom, Episcopalian Mrs. W. S. Corrigan, Catholic, Mrs. C. A. Baugus Baptist, and Mrs. Rowe Methodist and myself went out of curosity. It sounded good, but what was it?

We found out at the schools main building on the western edge of Wardell, where we met the area project director, Mrs. Mary Prentice, wife of the Presbyterian minister in Malden. She had the directness and sincerity that often accompanies ministers wives.

"MAMOS" said, using the initals for a name, "is a way out of the migrant cycle. You've probably heard the figures: In 1951 only one per cent of Missouri's cotton was picked by machines. Today about 95 per cent is machine-picked. A single two-row mechanical picker replaces 70 workers.

"The problem is that the migrant has been left behind. He has little education: seventy-five percent of the MAMOS trainees have less than a second grade education. He has probably never had a pernament home or periodic attention of physicians or dentists. He has asked his family as his father did, to forego regular meals, continued schooling and new clothes to go on their yearly pilgrimage from farm to farm from state to state looking for work. He rarely stays in one spot long enough to qualify for welfare or health programs or low income housing.

"Our program has no residence requirements. Priority is given to prospective trainees with the least wage income during the previous year, those with the largest number of dependents and those with the least education.

"In fact, it is almost easier to have too much to be able to qualify than too little. For there are only three requirements for a trainee: he must have earned 50 per cent of his income from agricultural employment: he must be employed only on a seasonal basis and by more than one employer during the preceeding calendar year and he must have an income that is below the federal government's established poverty level. For a family of four, this is $3,200. Only seven of first 145 trainees had an income of $2,000 or more the previous year.

"Physically, MAMOS is made up of training centers at Maldens Gobler and Marston plus the area office and training center at Wardell. MAMOS receives its money from title 3B of the Economic Opportunity Act; the section that provides for programs of assistance to migrants, seasonal farm workers and their families. From February, 1967 to September, 1968, MAMOS will have received $835,785. One pay them $38 per week plus $5 for each dependent up to five dependents.

But it's a long way from the hoe handle to the pencil. I've seen grown men with sweat rolling down their faces as they try to get their work-hardened hands around a pencil. That's why we use these," she said, handing us half-inch thick pencils for note taking. "It makes writing a little easier.

"We believe that the migrant is not a lazy man; that he can learn what he wants to know or what he needs to know in order to relate to the problems of a fast-changing world."

There are tangible results to show that this is true: The 326 men trained since MAMOS opened in 1967 have an annual net income gain of $450,000. Only eight had an income of 2,200 or more the previous year.

Reading, writing and arithmetic plus civics and consumer education including preparatory classes for the high school equivalency examination offered by the state of Missouri are the first part of the three-fold MAMOS program. The average trainee, entering with a second grade education, is working at a fourth grade level at the end of the 23 average weeks session or about 6 months.

Recently six men passed the high school equilvancy test to receive a general education' diploma. One trainee is enrolled in a regular high school and one migrant has entered college.

"Incidently," Mrs. Prentice told us, "he was considered retarded and had never been in a regular school before.

The second part of the program is pre-employment training. Vocational training is given in automobile mechanics, body and fender work, electricity and carpentry. How to apply for a job as well as what to expect on the job is included.

"A migrant often gets a job," Mrs. Prentic said, "only to leave it within a week or so. His employer calls him shiftless. The truth is, he left because he needed money. He was used to being paid at the end of every work day. No one told him that he would be paid once a week or even once every two weeks. And he never asked. If you are afraid of people you don't ask questions."

Earnest Reed was a tractor driver last year and a good one, making $1 per hour. But the $540 he earned last year wasn't enough to support his wife and 13 children. Today he is a plumber's helper making $1.70 per hour and expects to clear $3,300 this year. He just didn't know how to make the shift to a new job.

"Isn't education being able to choose alternate routes?

To contact trainees and to work with them and their families, MAMOS employees social aides--women who were migrants themselves. They attend a continuous in-service training program to learn how to work with families. While MAMOS is working to make professionals out of them, their training is concentrated in the areas that migrant families need first: how to use commodities, how to sew, how to take care of children and personal hygiene techniques. The trainees attend home extension courses and transmit their learning to the trainees wives at small group meetings.

One of the social aides, Mrs. Lila Ruff, was our guide to the Marston school and several homes. "We're the contact between the school and the family. We try to help them with their problems, to see that the children are in school, and to contact other agencies for them, such as welfare departments, Delmo housing or the FHA. We have to work slowly, just stopping in to chit-chat for awhile at first. I have 41 families I see at least every three weeks.

Mrs. Ruff, the mother of 13 children, is an articulate spokesman for the program as well as an example of the migrants desire to help themselves.

Her biggest regret is that she quite high school to get married. She was determined to finish school but it wasn't until she had been married many years and had 11 children that she got the opportunity to finish.

Her oldest child has completed two years at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale and another daughter is ready to enter. To pay college fees her husband drives the Hayti school bus. Then to feed the family, they all followed the migrant circuit from Florida oranges to Michigan cherries and back to Missouri for cotton.

Now that she has a good job, "It's going to be easier," she said.

Many people realized that not all migrants could work out their problems like the Ruff family, and that most migrants needed to be helped. A few had even sent soap, clothing and toothpaste. But that was not enough.

In 1965 the Missouri Council of Churches and the four Roman Catholic Dioceses of Missouri were contacted by concerned individuals and urged to do something . . . After much study the vision of MAMOS was made into a corporation and in 1967 received funds from the office of economic opportunity. But the religious institutations maintained their interest, having members on the board of directors and undertaking projects to help MAMOS.

"Don't lump us in with all poverty programs, "Mrs. Prentice said firmly. "We are very sensitive about this. Only 7.7 per cent of our grant goes for administrative purposes. You can't say that about all poverty programs.

"My office is a storeroom, she added, waving a hand at the four to ceiling shelves on the south side of the room and the boxes of supplies about the floor. "You won't find a new piece of machinery in the building.

Seriously she added, "when you consider the number of people to be helped, you can't afford to be wasteful."

FORTAS AND THORNBERRY

When Chief Justice Earl Warren submitted his resignation to President Johnson, he was asked by the president whom he would recommend to take his place. The answer was "Abe Fortas."

The Chief Justice based this recommendation partly on age—Fortas is 58, which would give him 12 to 15 active years to guide the court—partly on executive ability. The work of the Chief Justice, as Warren has seen it and has so effectively carried it out, is partly that of an administrator. Under the Constitution, the Chief Justice is charged, among other duties, with administering the judicial system of the United States, and for this he is paid the maginificent sum of $500 per year.

But also he must be the administrator—and a tactful one—of the eight other, sometimes differing, justices of the Supreme Court. The manner in which the Chief Justice assigns the writing of opinions, and the manner in which he gets unanimity or fails to get it, can influence history.

For instance, Warren very carefully and tactfully waited until he could get the entire court to go along with him in the famous 1954 School Desegregation Decree. Justice Robert Jackson was the most difficult member of the court on this issue. He was the last hold-out. Justice Stanley Reed, of Kentucky, was also reluctant. Finally, after winning over Reed, Warren went to see Jackson, then in the hospital, with the final draft of the decision. Jackson had been wavering but during that hospital visit he okayed the text which made the court unanimous.

Knowing the impact on the south, Warren had been anxious that the decision be unanimous.

Fortas, as his successor, Warren told the President, would have the ability to affect and influence harmony of the court.

—FORTAS'S CLOSEST FRIENDS—

Three men have played a dominant role in the life of the new Chief Justice. One of these, Harold Ickes, his old chief in the Interior Department, is dead. The other two are William O. Douglas and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Fortas was a law student at Yale when Douglas was a member of its law school faculty. When Douglas came to Washington as a member of the securities and exchange commission staff and later a commissioner, Fortas came with him. He was Douglas' understudy.

Douglas was close to Harold Ickes, who served as Secretary of the Interior longer and more vigorously than any man in history; and he recommended Fortas to Ickes as an up-and-coming young man who could help him in his battle with the big power companies.

It was while Fortas was handling reclamation and power projects in the public works administration that a gangling young congressman from Texas walked in to get a dam built for three Texas counties on the little Colorado River. Thus began the friendship between Abe Fortas and Lyndon B. Johnson, culminating in Abe's appointment to head the Supreme Court of the United States.

It was Fortas who did some fast and effective footwork when Johnson squeaked through by 87 votes in his Senate race over Gov. Coke Stevenson. There was a flap about some of the ballot boxes and Stevenson talked about a recount. Fortas advised getting a quick ruling from Justice Hugo Black. Black, who had jurisdiction over the judiciary of the southwest, came through with a favorable ruling which made Lyndon Johnson senator from Texas. Probably it was the most crucial event in Johnson's career which later took him to the White House.

Just after Johnson squeaked through in his senate victory, he met Homer Thornberry, who had run for Congress to fill Johnson's vacant congressional seat. Thornberry had won the primary by 37 votes and asked Johnson what his margin was.

"Eighty-seven votes," replied Johnson.

"That's a landslide," remarked Thornberry.

Lyndon was on his way to his radio station in Austin, and announced that Thornberry had described his margin as a landslide. Thereafter in Texas the new senator was nicknamed "Landslide Lyndon."

Abe Fortas went on to become Under Secretary of the Interior under Harold Ickes. His friend and former teacher, Douglas, went on to become Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

Later, when Lyndon Johnson became President, his first appointment to the court was his old friend Fortas, who then joined his old teacher, Douglas. Today, with Fortas' elevation to Chief Justice, the one-time student for the first time becomes senior to his onetime teachers.

During the years, Fortas has remained intimate with his two friends, Douglas and Johnson. He is a little sensitive regarding the latter friendship, because as a member of the court he is supposed to observe the strict separation of the judiciary from the executive provided by the Constitution. Yet he has been a frequent adviser to his old friend, now president. Johnson has consulted him on a wide range of problems, from the appointment of U.S. Attorney David Bress to be a judge in the district of Columbia, to escalation of the war in Vietnam.

Fortas is extremeley touchy about published reports of this advice, and has claimed such reports were libelous.

This points to one of the chief questions on which Fortas differs with the man whom he replaces. Earl Warren had pioneered the New York Times vs. Sullivan decision exempting public officials from protection of the libel laws in most cases. Fortas has fumed over this privately and has issued one ringing dissent publicly. He gives promise of being a sensitive Chief Justice when it comes to public criticism.

Generally, Fortas will be a more conservative jurist than the man whom he replaces. He will also be more political. He will tend to adhere to the diagnosis of the fames Mr. Dooley that "the Supreme Court follows the election returns."

On the question of Constitutional freedoms, however, Fortas will be just as strong as the Chief Justice. His law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter is the only one in Washington which had the courage to defend victims of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy during the period when government officials were being terrorized by the McCarthy witch hunt. Their law firm undertook the defense of Dr. Owen Lattimore of Johns Hopkins when McCarthy branded him as a communist and, after weeks and months of battling, finally won out.

The Arnold, Fortas and Porter law firm also defended the most famous case of a government civil servant accused by McCarthy, namely Dorothy Bailey.

In both cases they worked without fee, at tremendous cost to themselves and their staff and despite some criticism from the firm's blue ribbon clients on Wall Street.

Among these blue ribbon clients havybeen corporations prosecuted by the Justice Department for antitrust violations. However, Fortas in his decisions on the court so far has been a vigorous upholder of antitrust laws.

Early in his administration President Johnson wanted to appoint Fortas as Attorney General when Bobby Kennedy stepped down, but Fortas decline. One reason was the opposition of his law firm and his wife, both of whom claimed that Abe was the chief breadwinner of the firm and of the family. Later, when Abe finally accepted Johnson's appointment to the court, Mrs. Fortas, who works under her maiden name of Carolyn Agger, has plaintively remarked that she has to be the chief breadwinner of the family. She is one of the top tax lawyers of the United States.

—CROOK'S NEMESIS—

Homer Thornberry, now elevated to the Supreme Court, will be the second Texan in history to serve on the court. President Johnson emphasized this to some of the Senate leaders from the south whom he consulted before making the Fortas-Thornberry appointments.

Tom Clark, father of Attorney General Ramsey Clark, was the only other Texan ever to serve on the Supreme Court. President Johnson pointed out to some of the southern senators that since Clark had bowed out in favor of the first Negro ever appointed to the Supreme Court, Thurgood Marshall, Texas was now due the current vacancy.

Johnson first got to know Thornberry when the latter was a crusading young Attorney in Austin, where, as the President has said, "he drove all the crooks out of town."

The President quotes the late speaker Sam Rayburn as describing Thornberry as "the ablest member of Congress he knew." And since Rayburn also thought very highly of the young Texan who now serves as President of the United States, this was a real compliement.

As a member of the rules committee Thornberry was a staunch upholder of the New Deal and a battler for liberal legislation. He left an important hole on the rules committee which Lyndon Johnson worried about when President Kennedy appointed Thornberry as U.S. district judge in Austin.

World's Biggest Plane Receives Passing Grade

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — The successful flight of the world's biggest airplane proves there are practically no limits to construction of bigger planes, says Tom May, president of Lockheed-Georgia Co. But he says the world isn't ready for them.

The C5 Galaxy flew its first test flight Sunday. Although there were minor troubles, the Air Force and Lockheed-Georgia called the flight highly successful.

The C5 is being developed for the Air Force. Basically, it is a military plane, but the design can be changed to make it a commercial airplane.

May said, "We have preliminary plans for airplanes weighing over a million pounds. But it is fairly clear that the world is not quite ready for a commercial airplane of this size."

The C5 will carry 350 troops and all of their equipment. This one weighed 497,000 pounds on takeoff but is designed for more than 700,000 pounds.

"We like to talk about a commercial plane similar to the C5 which could carry nearly 1,000 passengers," May said at a news conference, "but the idea of carrying people on the flight deck, and freight in the hold, is extremely attractive to us."

May predicted that when the C5 becomes a commercial airplane, it probably will be used first as a freighter.

Future passenger jets will travel at speeds of between 1,500 and 2,000 miles an hour, and May said the relatively slow speed of the C5 would be a handicap in a passenger airplane.

Migrant Worker Often Needs Help To Enter New Field, Earn More

HEADQUARTERS for Missouri Associated migrant opportunity services at Wardell.

PRICE DOUGLASS teaches a class of Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services trainees.

I went in response to a phone call from Mrs. Burt Rowe, Sr., president of United Church Women in Sikeston.

"You must come she said, "we need a Presbyterian." For it was to be an ecumenical visit to the Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services, Inc., in Wardell, which was initiated by the Missouri Council of Churches and the four Roman Catholic diocese of Missouri.

Recently six men passed the high school equilvancy test to receive a general education' diploma. One trainee is enrolled in a regular high school and one migrant has entered college.

"Incidently," Mrs. Prentice told us, "he was considered retarded and had never been in a regular school before.

The second part of the program is pre-employment training. Vocational training is given in automobile mechanics, body and fender work, electricity and carpentry. How to apply for a job as well as what to expect on the job is included.

"A migrant often gets a job," Mrs. Prentic said, "only to leave it within a week or so. His employer calls him shiftless. The truth is, he left because he needed money. He was used to being paid at the end of every work day. No one told him that he would be paid once a week or even once every two weeks. And he never asked. If you are afraid of people you don't ask questions."

Earnest Reed was a tractor driver last year and a good one, making $1 per hour. But the $540 he earned last year wasn't enough to support his wife and 13 children. Today he is a plumber's helper making $1.70 per hour and expects to clear $3,300 this year. He just didn't know how to make the shift to a new job.

"Isn't education being able to choose alternate routes?

To contact trainees and to work with them and their families, MAMOS employees social aides--women who were migrants themselves. They attend a continuous in-service training program to learn how to work with families. While MAMOS is working to make professionals out of them, their training is concentrated in the areas that migrant families need first: how to use commodities, how to sew, how to take care of children and personal hygiene techniques. The trainees attend home extension courses and transmit their learning to the trainees wives at small group meetings.

One of the social aides, Mrs. Lila Ruff, was our guide to the Marston school and several homes. "We're the contact between the school and the family. We try to help them with their problems, to see that the children are in school, and to contact other agencies for them, such as welfare departments, Delmo housing or the FHA. We have to work slowly, just stopping in to chit-chat for awhile at first. I have 41 families I see at least every three weeks.

Mrs. Ruff, the mother of 13 children, is an articulate spokesman for the program as well as an example of the migrants desire to help themselves.

Her biggest regret is that she quite high school to get married. She was determined to finish school but it wasn't until she had been married many years and had 11 children that she got the opportunity to finish.

Her oldest child has completed two years at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale and another daughter is ready to enter. To pay college fees her husband drives the Hayti school bus. Then to feed the family, they all followed the migrant circuit from Florida oranges to Michigan cherries and back to Missouri for cotton.

Now that she has a good job, "It's going to be easier," she said.

Many people realized that not all migrants could work out their problems like the Ruff family, and that most migrants needed to be helped. A few had even sent soap, clothing and toothpaste. But that was not enough.

In 1965 the Missouri Council of Churches and the four Roman Catholic Diocesses of Missouri were contacted by concerned individuals and urged to do something . . . After much study the vision of MAMOS was made into a corporation and in 1967 received funds from the office of economic opportunity. But the religious institutations maintained their interest, having members on the board of directors and undertaking projects to help MAMOS.

"Don't lump us in with all poverty programs, ''Mrs. Prentice said firmly. "We are very sensitive about this. Only 7.7 per cent of our grant goes for administrative purposes. You can't say that about all poverty programs.

"My office is a storeroom, she added, waving a hand at the four to ceiling shelves on the south side of the room and the boxes of supplies about the floor. "You won't find a new piece of machinery in the building.

Seriously she added, "when you consider the number of people to be helped, you can't afford to be wasteful."

FORTAS AND THORNBERRY

When Chief Justice Earl Warren submitted his resignation to President Johnson, he was asked by the president whom he would recommend to take his place. The answer was "Abe Fortas."

The Chief Justice based this recommendation partly on age—Fortas is 58, which would give him 12 to 15 active years to guide the court—partly on executive ability. The work of the Chief Justice, as Warren has seen it and has so effectively carried it out, is partly that of an administrator. Under the Constitution, the Chief Justice is charged, among other duties, with administering the judicial system of the United States, and for this he is paid the maginificent sum of $500 per year.

But also he must be the administrator—and a tactful one—of the eight other, sometimes differing, justices of the Supreme Court. The manner in which the Chief Justice assigns the writing of opinions, and the manner in which he gets unanimity or fails to get it, can influence history.

For instance, Warren very carefully and tactfully waited until he could get the entire court to go along with him in the famous 1954 School Desegregation Decree. Justice Robert Jackson was the most difficult member of the court on this issue. He was the last hold-out. Justice Stanley Reed, of Kentucky, was also reluctant. Finally, after winning over Reed, Warren went to see Jackson, then in the hospital, with the final draft of the decision. Jackson had been wavering but during that hospital visit he okayed the text which made the court unanimous.

Knowing the impact on the south, Warren had been anxious that the decision be unanimous.

Fortas, as his successor, Warren told the President, would have the ability to affect and influence harmony of the court.

—FORTAS'S CLOSEST FRIENDS—

Three men have played a dominant role in the life of the new Chief Justice. One of these, Harold Ickes, his old chief in the Interior Department, is dead. The other two are William O. Douglas and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Fortas was a law student at Yale when Douglas was a member of its law school faculty. When Douglas came to Washington as a member of the securities and exchange commission staff and later a commissioner, Fortas came with him. He was Douglas' understudy.

Douglas was close to Harold Ickes, who served as Secretary of the Interior longer and more vigorously than any man in history; and he recommended Fortas to Ickes as an up-and-coming young man who could help him in his battle with the big power companies.

It was while Fortas was handling reclamation and power projects in the public works administration that a gangling young congressman from Texas walked in to get a dam built for three Texas counties on the little Colorado River. Thus began the friendship between Abe Fortas and Lyndon B. Johnson, culminating in Abe's appointment to head the Supreme Court of the United States.

It was Fortas who did some fast and effective footwork when Johnson squeaked through by 87 votes in his Senate race over Gov. Coke Stevenson. There was a flap about some of the ballot boxes and Stevenson talked about a recount. Fortas advised getting a quick ruling from Justice Hugo Black. Black, who had jurisdiction over the judiciary of the southwest, came through with a favorable ruling which made Lyndon Johnson senator from Texas. Probably it was the most crucial event in Johnson's career which later took him to the White House.

Just after Johnson squeaked through in his senate victory, he met Homer Thornberry, who had run for Congress to fill Johnson's vacant congressional seat. Thornberry had won the primary by 37 votes and asked Johnson what his margin was.

"Eighty-seven votes," replied Johnson.

''That's a landslide,'' remarked Thornberry.

Lyndon was on his way to his radio station in Austin, and announced that Thornberry had described his margin as a landslide. Thereafter in Texas the new senator was nicknamed "Landslide Lyndon."

Abe Fortas went on to become Under Secretary of the Interior under Harold Ickes. His friend and former teacher, Douglas, went on to become Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

Later, when Lyndon Johnson became President, his first appointment to the court was his old friend Fortas, who then joined his old teacher, Douglas. Today, with Fortas' elevation to Chief Justice, the one-time student for the first time becomes senior to his onetime teachers.

During the years, Fortas has remained intimate with his two friends, Douglas and Johnson. He is a little sensitive regarding the latter friendship, because as a member of the court he is supposed to observe the strict separation of the judiciary from the executive provided by the Constitution. Yet he has been a frequent adviser to his old friend, now president. Johnson has consulted him on a wide range of problems, from the appointment of U.S. Attorney David Bress to be a judge in the district of Columbia, to escalation of the war in Vietnam.

Fortas is extremeley touchy about published reports of this advice, and has claimed such reports were libelous.

This points to one of the chief questions on which Fortas differs with the man whom he replaces. Earl Warren had pioneered the New York Times vs. Sullivan decision exempting public officials from protection of the libel laws in most cases. Fortas has fumed over this privately and has issued one ringing dissent publicly. He gives promise of being a sensitive Chief Justice when it comes to public criticism.

Generally, Fortas will be a more conservative jurist than the man whom he replaces. He will also be more political. He will tend to adhere to the diagnosis of the fames Mr. Dooley that "the Supreme Court follows the election returns."

On the question of Constitutional freedoms, however, Fortas will be just as strong as the Chief Justice. His law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter is the only one in Washington which had the courage to defend victims of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy during the period when government officials were being terrorized by the McCarthy witch hunt. Their law firm undertook the defense of Dr. Owen Lattimore of Johns Hopkins when McCarthy branded him as a communist and, after weeks and months of battling, finally won out.

The Arnold, Fortas and Porter law firm also defended the most famous case of a government civil servant accused by McCarthy, namely Dorothy Bailey.

In both cases they worked without fee, at tremendous cost to themselves and their staff and despite some criticism from the firm's blue ribbon clients on Wall Street.

Among these blue ribbon clients havybeen corporations prosecuted by the Justice Department for antitrust violations. However, Fortas in his decisions on the court so far has been a vigorous upholder of antitrust laws.

Early in his administration President Johnson wanted to appoint Fortas as Attorney General when Bobby Kennedy stepped down, but Fortas decline. One reason was the opposition of his law firm and his wife, both of whom claimed that Abe was the chief breadwinner of the firm and of the family. Later, when Abe finally accepted Johnson's appointment to the court, Mrs. Fortas, who works under her maiden name of Carolyn Agger, has plaintively remarked that she has to be the chief breadwinner of the family. She is one of the top tax lawyers of the United States.

—CROOK'S NEMESIS—

Homer Thornberry, now elevated to the Supreme Court, will be the second Texan in history to serve on the court. President Johnson emphasized this to some of the Senate leaders from the south whom he consulted before making the Fortas-Thornberry appointments.

Tom Clark, father of Attorney General Ramsey Clark, was the only other Texan ever to serve on the Supreme Court. President Johnson pointed out to some of the southern senators that since Clark had bowed out in favor of the first Negro ever appointed to the Supreme Court, Thurgood Marshall, Texas was now due the current vacancy.

Johnson first got to know Thornberry when the latter was a crusading young Attorney in Austin, where, as the President has said, "he drove all the crooks out of town."

The President quotes the late speaker Sam Rayburn as describing Thornberry as "the ablest member of Congress he knew." And since Rayburn also thought very highly of the young Texan who now serves as President of the United States, this was a real compliement.

As a member of the rules committee Thornberry was a staunch upholder of the New Deal and a battler for liberal legislation. He left an important hole on the rules committee which Lyndon Johnson worried about when President Kennedy appointed Thornberry as U.S. district judge in Austin.

World's Biggest Plane Receives Passing Grade

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — The successful flight of the world's biggest airplane proves there are practically no limits to construction of bigger planes, says Tom May, president of Lockheed-Georgia Co. But he says the world isn't ready for them.

The C5 Galaxy flew its first test flight Sunday. Although there were minor troubles, the Air Force and Lockheed-Georgia called the flight highly successful.

The C5 is being developed for the Air Force. Basically, it is a military plane, but the design can be changed to make it a commercial airplane.

May said, "We have preliminary plans for airplanes weighing over a million pounds. But it is fairly clear that the world is not quite ready for a commercial airplane of this size."

The C5 will carry 350 troops and all of their equipment. This one weighed 497,000 pounds on takeoff but is designed for more than 700,000 pounds.

"We like to talk about a commercial plane similar to the C5 which could carry nearly 1,000 passengers," May said at a news conference, "but the idea of carrying people on the flight deck, and freight in the hold, is extremely attractive to us."

May predicted that when the C5 becomes a commercial airplane, it probably will be used first as a freighter.

Future passenger jets will travel at speeds of between 1,500 and 2,000 miles an hour, and May said the relatively slow speed of the C5 would be a handicap in a passenger airplane.

Faith Baldwin

--'Very Happy but Longing to Die'

RINGWOOD, England (AP) — Nearly three decades since quitting the convent after finding a nun's life unbearable, best-selling author Monica Baldwin says today:

"I'm very, very happy—but longing to die."

Now in her seventies, the woman who wrote "I Leap Over the Wall" is writing her autobiography and putting her affairs in order "so I won't be too much trouble to my executors."

"Death is the greatest experience of all," she says. "We know absolutely nothing about it. For me it means two great doors opening from darkness to blazing inaccessible light. It's that I'm waiting for."

Miss Baldwin still sees this world as a pretty awful place and London as "a cesspool." She lives quietly alone on the edge of the New Forest, more than 100 miles from the capital, because "though not a pious person, I find God so much more satisfying than man."

A cousin of Stanley (later Earl) Baldwin, who was three times Britain's prime minister between the wars, she was brought up as an Anglican but became a Roman Catholic convert when 17. She entered a strictly enclosed order of contemplative nuns as a Canoness Regular of the Lateran of St. Augustine before World War I. She came out 28 years later on October 26,1941, during World War II.

She still feels herself a Rip Van Winkle.

"My standards are pre-1914," she says. "We were completely cut off. Why, I didn't even know the names of the generals in the first war."

Her best-selling book, based on the Baldwin family motto Per Deum meum transilio murum (By the help of God I leap over the wall), tells something of that strange awakening to the world.

"I had not been more than a few hours out of the convent when I realized that I didn't know the first thing about modern life," she wrote. "I'd never even heard of the authors, athletes, film stars, politicians, whose names were news."

The power and speed of the modern world overwhelmed her. Her eyes goggled at women wearing short skirts, women smoking, at the lacy scanty lingerie which had replaced the stout underwear of her own schooldays.

"I was," she said then, "a potential grandparent with the outlook and mind of a pre-1914 schoolgirl."

In a sense, she says, she is still trying to catch up.

Today, in her trim beige two-piece knit-suit, with her gray hair short and neatly curled in modern style, there are moments when she still reflects the religious life. There is her obvious inner serenity, her calm way of talking, the folded hands, the occasionally downcast eyes. Twenty-eight years of obedience to a Rule still show.

Miss Baldwin recalls that religious life of obedience as "giving yourself as completely as possible short of death."

FAITH BALDWIN
She climbed the wall

BEYOND THE WALL

"It is the nearest thing to death without drying or it means nothing," she said the other day. "If you don't do that then the whole thing has no sense."

She described her motives in first entering the convent as mixed.

"I think I really wanted to save a soul," she said simply, adding: "Not some young man's soul—my mother's."

But, after giving herself to God, Miss Baldwin said she started to do a stupid and mean thing.

"I started taking myself back. I started saying: 'I've made a mistake. I've given more than I intended.'

"So, instead of living by the vow of obedience, you start taking back—oh little things at first. For example, you do what your superiors say but you start having mental reservations about it. This can lead to temptation when the big thing comes along. Then you start living according to your own sweet will. And every infidelity thickens the veil between God and yourself."

Miss Baldwin said she thought that, as they are now brought up, the life of a contemplative nun was impossible for the young girls of today unless they were of the stamp of a St. Teresa or a St. Catherine of Siena.

"Of course, things have changed a lot now," she said. "I hear they've taken down the grills in my old convent. And the voluminous 14th century clothes, so impractical, have been replaced by the most ghastly raiment today.

"But don't get the idea that I'm against the convent life for some. I'm still pro-convent."

Yet she's not too happy about the state of the Church today.

"I think nothing but persecution and a few martyrdoms will make us realize what our faith should really be," she said. "We're much too complacent. We're half-hearted, tepid, second-rate."

Asked if she traced any parallel between her own renunciation of her vows and the action of Father Charles Davis, the Roman Catholic theologian who gave up the priesthood and left the Church to marry, Miss Baldwin said:

"I think self-seeking in some form was behind the action of us both. It could be self-importance, self-interest, self-indulgence, self-love, self-pity. The only cure is prayer."

Prayer is something the former nun feels strongly about.

"The world is amuck today because people don't pray," she said. "They say their prayers—some of them—but they don't really pray. Prayer has got to be worked at like golf or cricket or ballet dancing or anything else you seek to perfect. If only people would work at prayer as they do at their golf, it would be a better world."

What shocks her most in today's swinging Britain is the corruption—"and I don't mean just in sexual behavior"—the dishonesty, the awful cruelty and the grabbing after money.

Television, she says, constantly puts the wrong images before the eyes of the people. The resulting materialism is worse than in the Renaissance.

Decor Italian-Style

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — You know how Italian film makers like to bare the functional yet aesthetic framework of their actresses?

Well, a lot of Italian design is in the same philosophical mold.

"Real design is concerned with everything, from the beginning," explained Ludovico Magistretti. "For example, at home when we make a stereophonic unit we never try to hide it—in bookcases, in cabinets. We want to have it always open. The professional engineering is a part of the design."

Magistretti is a 48-year-old architect-designer from Milan who, with half a dozen other Italian designers were on hand for the opening of the exhibit "Design Italian Style" at the Hallmark Gallery. The show will close July 18. As the most fluent in English, Magistretti was called upon to talk most of the time.

Politely, he gave the United States its due.

"American design has great merit," he said. "Real industrialized design began here. But now the big difference is in what is rightly called industrial design and what is stylism. The majority of American work is stylism and not design. You Americans always take care to cover something with something, to put skin to hide something."

In the New York show are furniture, fabrics, kitchen utensils, plastics, automobile models, lighting fixtures and ceramics. In each object the designer's personality and viewpoint emerges, yet, Magistretti said, "there's a similarity of thinking that we don't realize before we design."

Italian is far from being as definite a style as Danish, which he doesn't much admire. "The Danish are clever with wood," he conceded. "But it's so formalized."

A third-generation architect, Magistretti mainly designs buildings.

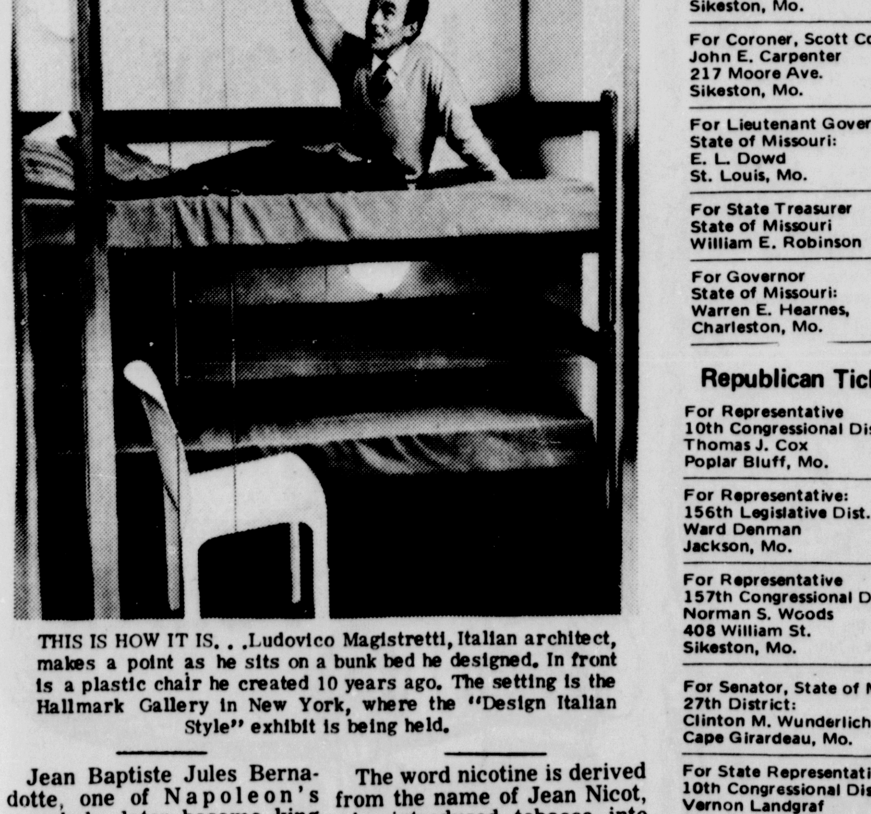
"But in my spare time I design these things." He waved a hand at a bunk bed he designed four years ago for his son "because I didn't find a good one to put in my house," a group of stack tables in bright primary colors and a molded plastic chair.

"I make sketches, but I never like to give a design and say 'do this.' It quite often must be changed. So I work along with the workmen, making changes as we go.

"Take this chair, made from a leaf of plastic. I had to mold it with my fingers. Plastics is a very interesting field, and with plastics we can meet the largest demand. Good craftsmen skilled in working with wood are getting harder to find and good wood furniture is going to be terribly expensive in the future."

He nodded at the chair again. "This plastic is not cheap. It's good stuff. To make the steel mold I had to work with tools and hands. The cost of the mold for this chair was $30,000. But we can produce one chair, ready to put into the carton for shipping, in three minutes."

Commercial distribution is difficult, he said. "But what is important is to penetrate something with new objects, to get people used to a new taste. That's the social side of our work, if you can call it that."



THIS IS HOW IT IS. . .Ludovico Magistretti, Italian architect, makes a point as he sits on a bunk bed he designed. In front is a plastic chair he created 10 years ago. The setting is the Hallmark Gallery in New York, where the "Design Italian Style" exhibit is being held.

Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals, later became king of Sweden as Charles XIV.

The word nicotine is derived from the name of Jean Nicot, who introduced tobacco into France in 1560.

Faith Baldwin

--'Very Happy but Longing to Die'

RINGWOOD, England (AP) — Nearly three decades since quitting the convent after finding a nun's life unbearable, best-selling author Monica Baldwin says today:

"I'm very, very happy—but longing to die."

Now in her seventies, the woman who wrote "I Leap Over the Wall" is writing her autobiography and putting her affairs in order "so I won't be too much trouble to my executors."

"Death is the greatest experience of all," she says. "We know absolutely nothing about it. For me it means two great doors opening from darkness to blazing inaccessible light. It's that I'm waiting for."

Miss Baldwin still sees this world as a pretty awful place and London as "a cesspool." She lives quietly alone on the edge of the New Forest, more than 100 miles from the capital, because "though not a pious person, I find God so much more satisfying than man."

A cousin of Stanley (later Earl) Baldwin, who was three times Britain's prime minister between the wars, she was brought up as an Anglican but became a Roman Catholic convert when 17. She entered a strictly enclosed order of contemplative nuns as a Canoness Regular of the Lateran of St. Augustine before World War I. She came out 28 years later on October 26,1941, during World War II.

She still feels herself a Rip Van Winkle.

"My standards are pre-1914," she says. "We were completely cut off. Why, I didn't even know the names of the generals in the first war."

Her best-selling book, based on the Baldwin family motto Per Deum meum transilio murum (By the help of God I leap over the wall), tells something of that strange awakening to the world.

"I had not been more than a few hours out of the convent when I realized that I didn't know the first thing about modern life," she wrote. "I'd never even heard of the authors, athletes, film stars, politicians, whose names were news."

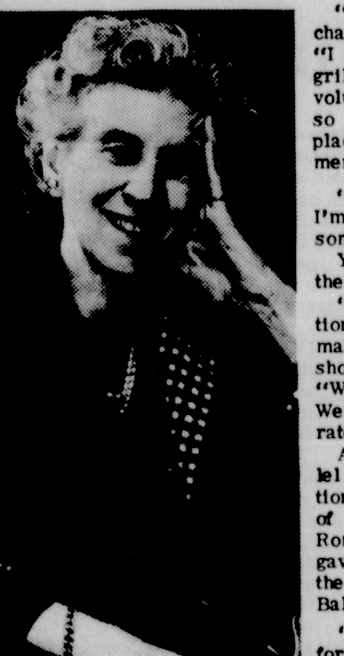
The power and speed of the modern world overwhelmed her. Her eyes goggled at women wearing short skirts, women smoking, at the lacy scanty lingerie which had replaced the stout underwear of her own schooldays.

"I was," she said then, "a potential grandparent with the outlook and mind of a pre-1914 schoolgirl."

In a sense, she says, she is still trying to catch up.

Today, in her trim beige two-piece knit-suit, with her gray hair short and neatly curled in modern style, there are moments when she still reflects the religious life. There is her obvious inner serenity, her calm way of talking, the folded hands, the occasionally downcast eyes. Twenty-eight years of obedience to a Rule still show.

Miss Baldwin recalls that religious life of obedience as "giving yourself as completely as possible short of death."



FAITH BALDWIN
She climbed the wall

BEYOND THE WALL

"It is the nearest thing to death without drying or it means nothing," she said the other day. "If you don't do that then the whole thing has no sense."

She described her motives in first entering the convent as mixed.

"I think I really wanted to save a soul," she said simply, adding: "Not some young man's soul—my mother's."

But, after giving herself to God, Miss Baldwin said she started to do a stupid and mean thing.

"I started taking myself back. I started saying: 'I've made a mistake. I've given more than I intended.'

"So, instead of living by the vow of obedience, you start taking back—oh little things at first. For example, you do what your superiors say but you start having mental reservations about it. This can lead to temptation when the big thing comes along. Then you start living according to your own sweet will. And every infidelity thickens the veil between God and yourself."

Miss Baldwin said she thought that, as they are now brought up, the life of a contemplative nun was impossible for the young girls of today unless they were of the stamp of a St. Teresa or a St. Catherine of Siena.

"Of course, things have changed a lot now," she said. "I hear they've taken down the grills in my old convent. And the voluminous 14th century clothes, so impractical, have been replaced by the most ghastly raiment today.

"But don't get the idea that I'm against the convent life for some. I'm still pro-convent."

Yet she's not too happy about the state of the Church today.

"I think nothing but persecution and a few martyrdoms will make us realize what our faith should really be," she said. "We're much too complacent. We're half-hearted, tepid,second-rate."

Asked if she traced any parallel between her own renunciation of her vows and the action of Father Charles Davis, the Roman Catholic theologian who gave up the priesthood and left the Church to marry, Miss Baldwin said:

"I think self-seeking in some form was behind the action of us both. It could be self-importance, self-interest, self-indulgence, self-love, self-pity. The only cure is prayer."

Prayer is something the former nun feels strongly about.

"The world is amuck today because people don't pray,"she said. "They say their prayers—some of them—but they don't really pray. Prayer has got to be worked at like golf or cricket or ballet dancing or anything else you seek to perfect. If only people would work at prayer as they do at their golf, it would be a better world."

What shocks her most in today's swinging Britain is the corruption—"and I don't mean just in sexual behavior"—the dishonesty, the awful cruelty and the grabbing after money.

Television, she says, constantly puts the wrong images before the eyes of the people. The resulting materialism is worse than in the Renaissance.

Decor Italian-Style

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — You know how Italian film makers like to bare the functional yet aesthetic framework of their actresses?

Well, a lot of Italian design is in the same philosophical mold.

"Real design is concerned with everything, from the beginning," explained Ludovico Magistretti. "For example, at home when we make a stereophonic unit we never try to hide it—in bookcases, in cabinets. We want to have it always open. The professional engineering is a part of the design."

Magistretti is a 48-year-old architect-designer from Milan who, with half a dozen other Italian designers were on hand for the opening of the exhibit "Design Italian Style" at the Hallmark Gallery. The show will close July 18. As the most fluent in English, Magistretti was called upon to talk most of the time.

Politely, he gave the United States its due.

"American design has great merit," he said. "Real industrialized design began here. But now the big difference is in what is rightly called industrial design and what is stylism. The majority of American work is stylism and not design. You Americans always take care to cover something with something, to put skin to hide something."

In the New York show are furniture, fabrics, kitchen utensils, plastics, automobile models, lighting fixtures and ceramics. In each object the designer's personality and viewpoint emerges, yet, Magistretti said, "there's a similarity of thinking that we don't realize before we design."

Italian is far from being as definite a style as Danish,which he doesn't much admire. "The Danish are clever with wood," he conceded. "But it's so formalized."

A third-generation architect, Magistretti mainly designs buildings.

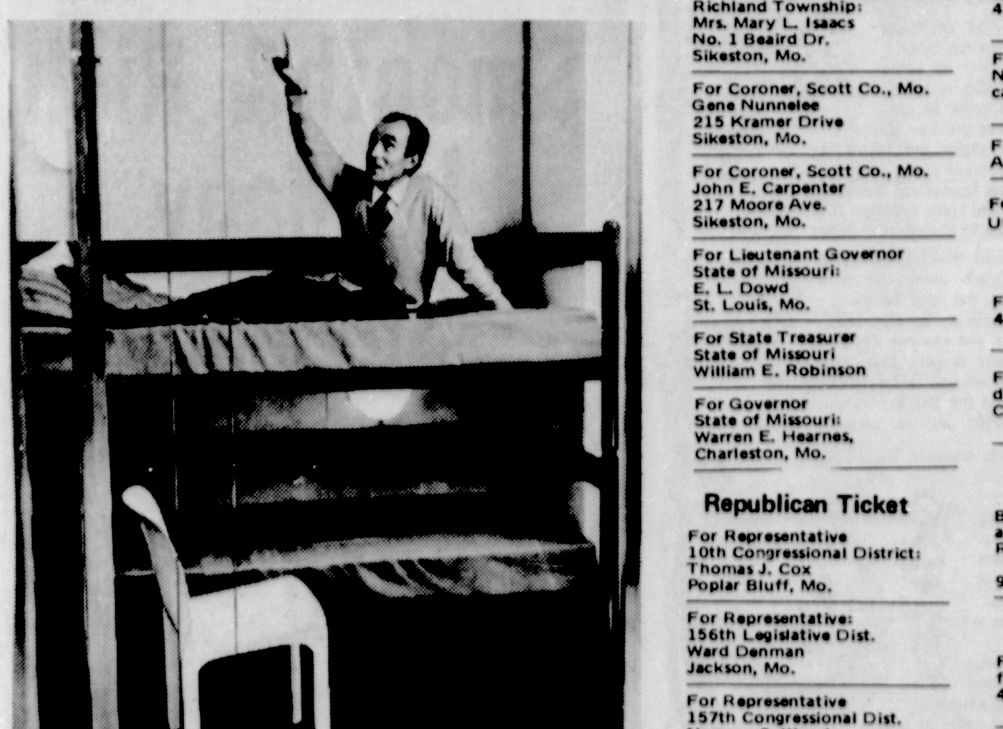
"But in my spare time I design these things." He waved a hand at a bunk bed he designed four years ago for his son "because I didn't find a good one to put in my house," a group of stack tables in bright primary colors and a molded plastic chair.

"I make sketches, but I never like to give a design and say 'do this.' It quite often must be changed. So I work along with the workmen, making changes as we go.

"Take this chair, made from a leaf of plastic. I had to mold it with my fingers.Plastics is a very interesting field, and with plastics we can meet the largest demand. Good craftsmen skilled in working with wood are getting harder to find and good wood furniture is going to be terribly expensive in the future."

He nodded at the chair again. "This plastic is not cheap. It's good stuff. To make the steel mold I had to work with tools and hands. The cost of the mold for this chair was $30,000. But we can produce one chair, ready to put into the carton for shipping, in three minutes."

Commercial distribution is difficult, he said. "But what is important is to penetrate something with new objects, to get people used to a new taste.That's the social side of our work, if you can call it that."



THIS IS HOW IT IS. . .Ludovico Magistretti, Italian architect, makes a point as he sits on a bunk bed he designed. In front is a plastic chair he created 10 years ago. The setting is the Hallmark Gallery in New York, where the "Design Italian Style" exhibit is being held.

Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals, later became king of Sweden as Charles XIV.

The word nicotine is derived from the name of Jean Nicot, who introduced tobacco into France in 1560.

Rolwing Opposed To Federal Gun Control Proposal

CHARLESTON -- State Rep. David Rolwing, a candidate for the tenth district Democratic nomination for Congress, today announced his opposition to proposed federal gun control legislation pending in Washington.

Rolwing, honored this year as the outstanding conservationist in the house of representatives by the Conservation Federation of Missouri, attacked what he said is the "mood of hysteria" over gun control legislation which has developed since the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Rolwing pointed out that California, where Kennedy was killed, has stringent gun registration laws, but said these were of no help in preventing the murder. "New laws will no more prevent violence and murder than prohibition laws were able to prevent consumption of alcohol. If a man wants a murder weapon, he will be able to get one," Rolwing said.

The Charleston legislator said he is particularly opposed to he proposed national registration of rifles and shotguns, the so-called "long guns." The majority of these weapons, Rolwing said, are in the hands of sportsmen, who have a legitimate reason for owning them. "There is no need to harass these legitimate gun users by adding a lot of red tape in the form of registration procedures."

Rolwing said, however, that he does favor severe restrictions on mail order and interstate shipment of small, concealable hand weapons, such as the .22 calibre pistol used by the killer of Senator Kennedy.

Rolwing said he believes the rising tide of violence in America may be attributed to many factors other than lack of a national gun registration law. Among these factors, he said, are the morbid portrayal of violent death on television and in movies, and the lack of moderation shown in the publications and speeches of various extremist organizations.

$144 Million Budget for M. U. Approved

COLUMBIA -- The total current operating budget of $144,023,731 for fiscal 1968-69 for the University of Missouri has been approved by the board of curators, President John C. Weaver announced. President Weaver said that the general operating budget, which does not include funds for restricted operations, amounts to $107,480,035. The restricted operations amounting to $36,543,696 cover such areas as outside sponsored research, other sponsored programs, scholarships and fellowships, and auxiliary enterprises. Auxiliary enterprises covers intercollegiate athletics, residence halls, bookstores, etc.

Ann Landers

Preacher's Generous Act Called Dangerous, Dumb

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having a problem with my husband. Please don't suggest I talk it over with my clergyman. He is my clergyman.

Here's what happened: Last month "Mr. Greatheart" gave his gasoline credit card to a woman I've never seen. Her husband is in jail. Nowadays people can buy just about everything under the sun with a gas credit card. I was stunned that he would allow a woman such privileges.

The woman phoned two weeks ago and asked me what to do with the credit card now that she had found a job. I handed the phone to my husband. He instructed her to mail it to him. (This was how I learned of it.)

Two weeks have passed and the card has not arrived. My husband doesn't know where the woman is or which credit card he gave her.

We've been married 20 years and have four children. Our life has been one endless financial struggle. I am hurt and shocked. What do you make of this? --- WEARY

Dear Weary: If you suspect hanky-panky, forget it. No woman would ask the wife of a man with whom she'd been fooling around what to do with his credit card -- unless she is crazy, that is.

When your clergyman receives the bill he should cancel the card and keep a record of the woman's charges -- in case she would like to repay him one of these days. Your husband probably thought he was being generous, but in my opinion it was a dumb and dangerous thing to do.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing in to the mother who found goofballs in her son's pocket. He said he was using them to stay awake studying for college exams.

When I was in undergraduate school I, too, relied on "bennies" -- until one day I worke up feeling very strange. I discovered my heartbeat was 166. I was frightened out of my wits and went immediately to our family doctor. He gave me some invaluable advice which I'd like to pass on.

It seems the doctor was an Air Force pilot in World War II. The medics used to give the pilots artificial stimulants for long-distance bombing raids. They stopped, however, when the casualty rate increased. They discovered those artificial stimulants did funny things to a pilot's judgment, vision and space perception. The pilots were ordered to lay off the bennies and to take 10- or 15-minute naps when they felt the need for a boost.

I tried the pilot-doctor's suggestion and it worked splendidly. I was able to study efficiently for about 18 hours out of a 24-hour period. My grades improved and I had to admit that the cramming I had done on "bennies" had not produced the high marks I'd hoped for.

Pass the word, will you, Ann? I spent nine years in college and tried just about everything the students are trying now, so I ought to know. --- COLORADO PROF

Dear Prof: Consider it passed. A word from one who has made the scene packs a much harder wallop. And thanks for the lesson, Prof. Those who listen will go to the head of the class.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents ....if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Careless Boatsman Travels at Own Risk

By Jack Strauss,
LL.B.

Finley loved motorboat races and could go anywhere to participate in one. One day, while on a strange river, and while warming up his boat just prior to a race, he suddenly went shooting off into space, over a dam, at 50 mph.

A practical person, and with no place to go but down, Finley immediately began saying his prayers. Holding his nose as he hit the water below, he sued the owner of the dam for his injuries when he finally glob-globbed to the surface.

"He can't hold me responsible," protested the owner. "I didn't tell Finley to go shooting over my dam."

"Believe me," was Finley's answer. "I didn't do it on purpose. If I had known the dam was there, I would have worn a parachute instead of a life preserver. Signs should have been posted and other precautions taken to warn people that the darn dam was there. Not to have done so was pure negligence."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dam owner pay Finley for his injries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the only rational inference to be drawn is that the accident was due solely to Finley's irrational deference to where he was going on an unfamiliar river at 50 mph. Therefore, his own carelessness bars any recovery for his injuries.

Kennedy Book Growing in Popularity

The new close-to-the-news book, TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY: THE STORY OF THE KENNEDYS, now in production for this and other member newspapers of The Associated Press, has increased in size even before going to press.

It is being expanded from 190 to 224 large-size pages to accommodate the wealth of information and the fine pictures available in color and in black and white. There is no increase, however, in the special $3 price at which the book may be obtained through this newspaper.

Since TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY is a polished production by some of the best writers and most skillful editors in the world's largest news gathering organization, there has been no thought of making it an "instant" slapdash publication. The volume's scope, covering not just the assassination of Senator Kennedy but the whole dramatic story of the Kennedy family from poverty to power and tragedy, would foreclose that. Nevertheless, first books are still expected to come off the press by the middle of next month, a remarkable accomplishment for a publication of this caliber.

About 600 AP newspapers are cooperating in this public service project, and nearly 200,000 of the books have been spoken for already. Translation into a dozen foreign languages also is expected.

If you have not yet reserved your copy, we suggest you send your check at once to "Triumph and Tragedy" in care of The Daily Sikeston, Mo. Standard. Box 66, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. 12601.

Rolwing Opposed To Federal Gun Control Proposal

CHARLESTON -- State Rep. David Rolwing, a candidate for the tenth district Democratic nomination for Congress, today announced his opposition to proposed federal gun control legislation pending in Washington.

Rolwing, honored this year as the outstanding conservationist in the house of representatives by the Conservation Federation of Missouri, attacked what he said is the "mood of hysteria" over gun control legislation which has developed since the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Rolwing pointed out that California, where Kennedy was killed, has stringent gun registration laws, but said these were of no help in preventing the murder. "New laws will no more prevent violence and murder than prohibition laws were able to prevent consumption of alcohol. If a man wants a murder weapon, he will be able to get one," Rolwing said.

The Charleston legislator said he is particularly opposed to he proposed national registration of rifles and shotguns, the so-called "long guns." The majority of these weapons, Rolwing said, are in the hands of sportsmen, who have a legitimate reason for owning them. "There is no need to harass these legitimate gun users by adding a lot of red tape in the form of registration procedures."

Rolwing said, however, that he does favor severe restrictions on mail order and interstate shipment of small, concealable hand weapons, such as the .22 calibre pistol used by the killer of Senator Kennedy.

Rolwing said he believes the rising tide of violence in America may be attributed to many factors other than lack of a national gun registration law. Among these factors, he said, are the morbid portrayal of violent death on television and in movies, and the lack of moderation shown in the publications and speeches of various extremist organizations.

The restricted operations amounting to $36,543,696 cover such areas as outside sponsored research, other sponsored programs, scholarships and fellowships, and auxiliary enterprises. Ann Landers

Preacher's Generous Act Called Dangerous, Dumb

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having a problem with my husband. Please don't suggest I talk it over with my clergyman. He is my clergyman.

Here's what happened: Last month "Mr. Greatheart" gave his gasoline credit card to a woman I've never seen. Her husband is in jail. Nowadays people can buy just about everything under the sun with a gas credit card. I was stunned that he would allow a woman such privileges.

The woman phoned two weeks ago and asked me what to do with the credit card now that she had found a job. I handed the phone to my husband. He instructed her to mail it to him. (This was how I learned of it.)

Two weeks have passed and the card has not arrived. My husband doesn't know where the woman is or which credit card he gave her.

We've been married 20 years and have four children. Our life has been one endless financial struggle. I am hurt and shocked. What do you make of this? --- WEARY

Dear Weary: If you suspect hanky-panky, forget it. No woman would ask the wife of a man with whom she'd been fooling around what to do with his credit card -- unless she is crazy, that is.

When your clergyman receives the bill he should cancel the card and keep a record of the woman's charges -- in case she would like to repay him one of these days. Your husband probably thought he was being generous, but in my opinion it was a dumb and dangerous thing to do.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing in to the mother who found goofballs in her son's pocket. He said he was using them to stay awake studying for college exams.

When I was in undergraduate school I, too, relied on "bennies" -- until one day I worke up feeling very strange. I discovered my heartbeat was 166. I was frightened out of my wits and went immediately to our family doctor. He gave me some invaluable advice which I'd like to pass on.

It seems the doctor was an Air Force pilot in World War II. The medics used to give the pilots artificial stimulants for long-distance bombing raids. They stopped, however, when the casualty rate increased. They discovered those artificial stimulants did funny things to a pilot's judgment, vision and space perception. The pilots were ordered to lay off the bennies and to take 10- or 15-minute naps when they felt the need for a boost.

I tried the pilot-doctor's suggestion and it worked splendidly. I was able to study efficiently for about 18 hours out of a 24-hour period. My grades improved and I had to admit that the cramming I had done on "bennies" had not produced the high marks I'd hoped for.

Pass the word, will you, Ann? I spent nine years in college and tried just about everything the students are trying now, so I ought to know. --- COLORADO PROF

Dear Prof: Consider it passed. A word from one who has made the scene packs a much harder wallop. And thanks for the lesson, Prof. Those who listen will go to the head of the class.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents ....if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Careless Boatsman Travels at Own Risk

By Jack Strauss,
LL.B.

Finley loved motorboat races and could go anywhere to participate in one. One day, while on a strange river, and while warming up his boat just prior to a race, he suddenly went shooting off into space, over a dam, at 50 mph.

A practical person, and with no place to go but down, Finley immediately began saying his prayers. Holding his nose as he hit the water below, he sued the owner of the dam for his injuries when he finally glob-globbed to the surface.

"He can't hold me responsible," protested the owner. "I didn't tell Finley to go shooting over my dam."

"Believe me," was Finley's answer. "I didn't do it on purpose. If I had known the dam was there, I would have worn a parachute instead of a life preserver. Signs should have been posted and other precautions taken to warn people that the darn dam was there. Not to have done so was pure negligence."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dam owner pay Finley for his injries?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the only rational inference to be drawn is that the accident was due solely to Finley's irrational deference to where he was going on an unfamiliar river at 50 mph. Therefore, his own carelessness bars any recovery for his injuries.

Kennedy Book Growing in Popularity

The new close-to-the-news book, TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY: THE STORY OF THE KENNEDYS, now in production for this and other member newspapers of The Associated Press, has increased in size even before going to press.

It is being expanded from 190 to 224 large-size pages to accommodate the wealth of information and the fine pictures available in color and in black and white. There is no increase, however, in the special $3 price at which the book may be obtained through this newspaper.

Since TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY is a polished production by some of the best writers and most skillful editors in the world's largest news gathering organization, there has been no thought of making it an "instant" slapdash publication. The volume's scope, covering not just the assassination of Senator Kennedy but the whole dramatic story of the Kennedy family from poverty to power and tragedy, would foreclose that. Nevertheless, first books are still expected to come off the press by the middle of next month, a remarkable accomplishment for a publication of this caliber.

About 600 AP newspapers are cooperating in this public service project, and nearly 200,000 of the books have been spoken for already. Translation into a dozen foreign languages also is expected.

If you have not yet reserved your copy, we suggest you send your check at once to "Triumph and Tragedy" in care of The Daily Sikeston, Mo. Standard. Box 66, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. 12601.

Prospects Bright for Lower Fiscal Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with higher taxes and a congressional mandate to cut spending, the federal government headed into a new fiscal year today with the prospect of compiling its smallest deficit in three or perhaps four years.

The budget deficit in the fiscal year which ended at midnight Sunday ran to about $25 billion by the administration's own estimate—the fourth largest in history.

President Johnson gave the government its deficit-cutting tools last Friday when he signed the 10 per cent income tax surcharge and accepted at the same time the $6 billion in spending cuts he doesn't want.

Americans will begin paying higher taxes in paychecks withholding after July 13.

The tax boost and spending cut could drop the deficit for the new fiscal year to as low as $2.5 billion if present spending estimates remain unchanged, an unlikely prospect.

The government last ran a deficit that low in fiscal 1965 at $1.1 billion. The red ink rose to $3.7 billion in 1966 and to $8.8 billion in the fiscal year which ended one year ago.

The only official word from the administration is that the deficit in the new year should move to well below the $8 billion projected last January.

Spending for the Vietnam war at about $27 billion caused the large deficit in the fiscal year just ended. War costs are now figured at about $28.4 billion in the new fiscal year.

Only three World War II deficits were higher. All totaled more than $50 billion, with the one in 1943 reading $57.4 billion.

In the last fiscal year, total spending is expected to hit between $175 and $180 billion when all the figures are compiled in about three to four weeks. Revenue can be expected to total about $153 billion.

Last January, Johnson figured spending in the new fiscal year at $186 billion but since then the cost of the war hiked another $2.6 billion and Congress ordered the $6 billion cut in non-war costs.

The tax package signed last Friday—which also includes a speed-up in collection of corporate taxes and extension of the 10 per cent excise tax on telephone service and 7 per cent excise on automobiles—will increase tax collections this year by more than $15 billion.

Fiscal 1968 just ended was the eighth straight deficit year. The last surplus came in fiscal 1960 at $213 million.

When Johnson submitted his budget to Congress last January, he envisioned a $19.8 billion deficit in the year just ended and an $8 billion deficit in the new year.

Because of the continuing deficits, the federal debt has jumped to about $350 billion.

Prospects Bright for Lower Fiscal Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with higher taxes and a congressional mandate to cut spending, the federal government headed into a new fiscal year today with the prospect of compiling its smallest deficit in three or perhaps four years.

The budget deficit in the fiscal year which ended at midnight Sunday ran to about $25 billion by the administration's own estimate—the fourth largest in history.

President Johnson gave the government its deficit-cutting tools last Friday when he signed the 10 per cent income tax surcharge and accepted at the same time the $6 billion in spending cuts he doesn't want.

Americans will begin paying higher taxes in paychecks withholding after July 13.

The tax boost and spending cut could drop the deficit for the new fiscal year to as low as $2.5 billion if present spending estimates remain unchanged, an unlikely prospect.

The government last ran a deficit that low in fiscal 1965 at $1.1 billion. The red ink rose to $3.7 billion in 1966 and to $8.8 billion in the fiscal year which ended one year ago.

The only official word from the administration is that the deficit in the new year should move to well below the $8 billion projected last January.

Spending for the Vietnam war at about $27 billion caused the large deficit in the fiscal year just ended. War costs are now figured at about $28.4 billion in the new fiscal year.

Only three World War II deficits were higher. All totaled more than $50 billion, with the one in 1943 reading $57.4 billion.

In the last fiscal year, total spending is expected to hit between $175 and $180 billion when all the figures are compiled in about three to four weeks. Revenue can be expected to total about $153 billion.

Last January, Johnson figured spending in the new fiscal year at $186 billion but since then the cost of the war hiked another $2.6 billion and Congress ordered the $6 billion cut in non-war costs.

The tax package signed last Friday—which also includes a speed-up in collection of corporate taxes and extension of the 10 per cent excise tax on telephone service and 7 per cent excise on automobiles—will increase tax collections this year by more than $15 billion.

Fiscal 1968 just ended was the eighth straight deficit year. The last surplus came in fiscal 1960 at $213 million.

When Johnson submitted his budget to Congress last January, he envisioned a $19.8 billion deficit in the year just ended and an $8 billion deficit in the new year.

Because of the continuing deficits, the federal debt has jumped to about $350 billion.
